Gromyko Set To Rip Belgium And Dag In Congo 'Conspiracy'

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko was expected to open a new debate on the Congo today in the U.N. General Assembly with charges that Belgium, Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold and Congolese President Joseph Kasavubu are conspiring to dismember the chaotic central African territory.

Gromyko's newest target was the decision by Kasavubu and all other Congo political leaders except Soviet-backed Antoine Gizenga to junk the unworkable federal government plan left by Belgium and replace it with a confederation of semi-independent states.

Some observers expected Gromyko would pick up Ghana President Kwame Nkrumah's argument that Kasavubu, in accepting the presidency of the proposed confederation, had quit the presidency of the republic and had lost his right to U.N. recognition as the Congo's chief of state.

Hammarskjold was reported to have asked Rajeshwar Dayal of India to continue as head of the U.N. operation in the Congo despite the Kasavubu government's repeated demands for his recall. Kasavubu accused Dayal of bias toward the late Patrice Lumumba and toward Gizenga after Lumumba's death.

New York Herald Tribune correspondent Marguerite Higgins reported from Leopoldville Sunday that, according to high sources, Hammarskjold is continuing Dayal in the Congo post because the secretary-general "fears to offend Dayal's countryman and boss, Prime Minister Nehru of India."

Hammarskjold was said to have Ceylon's promise of 800 to 1,000 troops for the U.N. force in the Congo which, with the combat battalion now being sent by India, would build the depleted force to a strength of more than 20,000 men. The secretary-general hopes to increase the force to a total of 25,000 troops.

Hammarskjold also scheduled a meeting today with his advisory Congo committee to choose a commission of jurists to investigate the death of Lumumba, slain in Katanga Province after Kasavubu sent him there as a prisoner last January.

Reports from the Congo said the U.N. force and Gizenga's Stanleyville regime had launched a joint operation by 150 Malayan troops and 50 Congolese soldiers to try to mop up roaming bands of pagan fanatics known as "leopard men" terrorizing whites and the Congolese population in sections of Kivu Province.

The joint force arrived at Kasongo today after a 200-mile march from Kindu and sent a terse message to U. N. headquarters: "All is well." Apparently they had met no resistance from the bow-and-arrow gangs, believed to total several hundred men, who reportedly have about 30 whites in the area virtually at their mercy and whose professed aim is to kill all whites.

SNOWY SCENES were not uncommon in Lubbock, Tex., over the weekend after a sudden 5-inch snowfall that piled up on tree limbs, causing many to break off. Cars were hit and streets littered with debris. (UPI Telephoto)

U.S. Defense Needs Cited In Proposal

President Planning Few Basic Changes In Eisenhower Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy is reported ready to submit a balanced budget to Congress soon—and then supplement it with a request for at least $1 billion in deficit defense spending.

Congressional leaders have been informed that the President hopes by making separate recommendations for defense spending increases to drive two points home to the country:

1. That he is making every effort to keep the nation on a pay-as-you-go basis.

2. That the reason he is unable to do so at this point lies in the need for a stepped-up defense effort to which he pointed in the presidential campaign.

Kennedy apparently plans few over-all changes in the $80.9-billion budget that former President Dwight D. Eisenhower sent to Congress in January for the fiscal year beginning July 1. Savings Kennedy's experts have been able to calculate in some areas may be offset by increases in others.

Eisenhower estimated a $1.5-billion surplus. But this was based on an $82.3-billion income that Kennedy's advisers don't believe will be reached. Eisenhower also banked on postal rate increases and hikes in some taxes that Congress may not grant.

Eisenhower estimated defense outlays at $42.9 billion—up $1.4 billion from the current fiscal year. If Kennedy can offer a balanced budget which retains that figure, he is said to feel the country will go along with a supplemental request for a billion more in military funds.

Some of this outlay would be channeled into missile development, with stress on the reliability and protection of long-range missiles.

Congress members have been told the new defense stepup would add 55,000 men to the Army to bring its manpower to 925,000 and boost the Marine Corps from 175,000 to 200,000. These increases, with some modernization of weapons, would be designed to boost U.S. limited-war capacities.

Eisenhower figured foreign aid spending at $3.6 billion in the year, including $1.8 billion in military assistance and $1.8 billion for economic outlays.

Kennedy is reported considering asking Congress to authorize a five-year, $8-billion foreign economic assistance program. If it were approved by Congress, actual economic aid spending for the new fiscal year would be about the same as Eisenhower forecast.

No Progress Seen On Laos After Parley

Rusk, Gromyko Air Cold War Issues In Lengthy Conference

WASHINGTON (AP)—No indications of progress toward ending the Laotian crisis have stemmed from a lengthy U.S.-Soviet conference on cold war issues that threaten to become hot.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko restated in detail the U.S. and Soviet positions during an extraordinary five-hour conference Saturday.

The two, accompanied by top advisers, began talking over lunch at the State Department at 1 p.m. and did not part until dusk.

A joint statement, couched in very general terms, said only that they hoped their "open and frank discussion will lead to a better mutual understanding of the positions and attitudes of both governments and may facilitate the consideration of outstanding problems."

Rusk is believed to have made it very clear to Gromyko, and thus to Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, that the United States has no intention of allowing beleaguered Laos to be taken over by Communist rebels.

The United States has several times expressed deep concern over a Communist air lift of arms to pro-Communist Pathet Lao rebels, which threatens to lead to an arms race on both sides.

Heart Failure Called Factor In Auto Death

A 39-year-old Salineville area man died after a car fell on him Saturday afternoon about 2:30 at the home of his brother-in-law, Joseph Brown of Hammondsville R. D. 1.

Dr. R. C. Costello, deputy Columbiana County coroner, said an autopsy showed Lawrence E. Speece of Maple Hill Rd., Salineville R. D. 1, died of heart failure, although the car falling on him was the primary factor.

There were no bone fractures. Mr. Speece was lying on his side under the rear of the car in the Brown garage. The car is owned by Brown.

Dr. Costello said the car had been raised with a bumper jack, Brown left for about 5 or 10 minutes and when he returned he found the jack had slipped and Mr. Speece was pinned beneath the car.

Brown used the jack to raise the car and pull Mr. Speece free. He was pronounced dead on arrival at City Hospital at 3 p. m.

Mr. Speece was born July 23, 1921 at Clarington, a son of Mrs. Emma Speece of Clarington and the late John Speece. He was a member of the Wellsville Pentacostal Church.

Besides his mother, survivors include his widow, Mrs. Celesta Speece of Salineville; two daughters, Miss Frances Speece, at home, and Mrs. Doris Dixon of Salineyille; a son, Donald Speece at home; three sisters, Mrs. Velma Brown of Hammondsville R. D. 1, Mrs. Mary Mosher of Clarington and Mrs. Ora Turner of Zanesville; five brothers, John Speece of Mundelein, Ill., Ray Speece of Bellaire, Jay Speece of Clarington,

Fire Destroys House During Owner's Trip

Loss Of $7,500 Set In Dixonville Blaze; 21 Firemen Called

Loss of $7,500 has been estimated in a fire which destroyed the home of Roland McLevey of Macrum St., Dixonville, while the owner was absent Sunday afternoon.

Total contents of the house were lost, Liverpool Township, East, volunteer firemen reported.

Some 21 firemen, including Robert Badger, assistant chief, answered the call at 3:15. The fire is believed to have started before 1:30, when an electric clock in the living room stopped because of power failure, firemen said.

McLevey had gone to Alliance about 10 a. m. to visit a married son there. He was informed there of the fire and returned a little after 5, firemen said.

Cause of the fire was not known. A representative of the state fire marshal's office at Warren was expected to arrive today to help determine it.

The fire was reported "very hot." Firemen had to use their Scott Air-Packs. There were no injuries. There was no one at home at the time of the fire, firemen said. McLevey has another son, who is a high school senior.

Hotel At Wellsville Hit By $4,000 Fire

A $4,000 fire hit the Riverview Hotel at 3rd and Main Sts., Wellsville, Sunday at 5:45 a. m., chasing five guests into the early morning cold.

The fire was discovered by one of the occupants, who was awakened by the dense smoke which quickly filled the three - story brick building.

Fire Chief Robert Lewis said the fire was in a small storeroom at the rear of the hotel, just off the kitchen. The cause is not known.

The damage was estimated at $2,000 to the building and $2,000 to the contents, primarily smoke damage.

Five guests were quickly routed out of bed and escaped. Lewis said the firemen were slowed in their initial attack on the fire as it was first thought that two men still were in their rooms.

The smoke was so dense the firemen had to don smoke masks, feel their way along the walls and then force their way into the rooms where the men were supposed to be. It was later learned one had escaped when the alarm was given and the second had not been at the hotel all night.

The hotel is operated by D. D. Chapel, 100 3rd St., Wellsville.

Seventeen firemen responded to the call.

2-Way Mishap On City Street Hurts Woman

Continuance Granted Motorist Cited For St. Clair Collision

An East Liverpool area woman was hospitalized this morning with injuries suffered in a traffic collision at St. Clair Ave. and Blackmore St.

Mrs. Sylvia Merriman, 26, of Birch Rd. was admitted to City Hospital for X-rays. Hospital attendants said she suffered possible neck and shoulder injuries.

The other driver, Mrs. Beulah Malkin, 57, of Curry St. was cited by police for failing to stop in the assured clear distance. She was taken into Municipal Court, but her case was continued until 3:30 p. m. Tuesday.

According to police, Mrs. Merriman had halted behind another car stopped to pick up a passenger when her car was rammed by Mrs. Malkin's 1959 sedan. Mrs. Malkin said she saw the front car slow but was unable to avoid the collision. The mishap was timed at 8:58 a. m.

The blinding rays of the sun were blamed for a collision at 7:12 a. m. at E. 2nd St. and Broadway.

Ralph Johnson, 65, of 203 W. 2nd St., told police he was crossing the railroad tracks but was blinded by the sun and cut too short, striking the stopped 1960 car driven by Clinton R. Alderman, 25, of Box 288 and owned by Eloise Joy, 1603 St. George St.

Charges of driving while under the influence of alcohol were filed against an 18-year-old Imperial (Pa.) youth as the aftermath of a collision Sunday at 2:10 a. m. on E. 3rd St. at Walnut St.

Herbert Auten was arrested after a collision that damaged his 1955 station wagon and a 1956 two-

Loss Of $100 Seen In Entry At Local Store

The owner of a downtown market was scheduled to complete a check late this afternoon to determine the amount of cash and merchandise taken in a burglary of his store Sunday night.

Police said the burglary of Alex's Carry-Out, 613 Jackson St., operated by James Cunningham Jr., 303 Moore St., was discovered at 11:15 last night by Patrolman K. H. Mooney while on routine patrol.

A cigar box containing currency was stolen from a desk drawer. Although Cunningham did not file a report on the loss with police, the family said it probably will total "less than $100."

The intruder gained entrance by hurling a stone through a 15-x-22-inch window on the southwest corner of the building. He ransacked the soft drink and frozen food cases, then went behind the counter to the desk and removed the box containing the money, police said.

Drawers built into the counter also were ransacked, but apparently nothing was taken. A brown paper bag containing a small amount in pennies was found on the floor at the rear of the store, near the window through which the burglar entered.

The cash register containing "a sizeable amount" in change apparently was left undisturbed, officers said. The intruder left via a door on the west side of the building, leaving the door open. Officer Mooney discovered the burglary when he found the door open.

The burglary apparently occured sometime after 8:30 Sunday night, when a member of the family went to the store to obtain some groceries, officers said. The store is closed from Saturday night until Monday morning.

Cunningham left for work early this morning at the Midland Works of the Crucible Steel Co. He is to make a definite check on the loss and file a report with police when he returns about 5 this afternoon.

Two other thefts were reported over the weekend.

Ross Jackson, 838 Spring Grove Ave., told police at 1:03 p. m. Saturday that a fire siren which he had stored in his garage was stloen sometime early last week.

A flasher unit and a barricade in use on the city freeway project were stolen Friday night or early Saturday, the Fishel Co. of Colum-

Prelate Defies Polish Regime Over Religion

Red Leaders Deny Persecution, Claim Roman Provocation

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—Hurling defiance at the Polish Communist regime, Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski pledged Sunday that the Roman Catholic Church will not bend to the Red "Caesars" in the mounting church-state struggle.

"I tell you Caesars that you will bow to your God and you will serve only him and no one else," the Polish primate declared. "Satan is mighty but man will not bow his head before him."

The cardinal's voice boomed through the high-vaulted Church of the Visitation as he declared that state-sponsored youth groups characterized by "atheization, laicization, indifferentism, rationalism, etc." show the Communist rulers are persecuting the church.

"It is so easily said that there is no struggle against religion," Cardinal Wyszynski said. "And what is this? What can one call this?"

House Vote Slated

Assembly Plan Would Cut Unpaid Mental Care Bills

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Complete revision of the state's system in collecting bills for care of mental patients is due for a vote in the Ohio House Wednesday.

The proposal would wipe out accounts incurred before Jan. 1, 1956, and base all collections on ability of relatives and others to pay. None would be liable in the future for care of full-time mental patients in institutions more than 15 years.

The measure grew out of protests last year over efforts by Gov. Michael V. DiSalle to clean up a backlog of more than 250,000 overdue accounts totaling a half-billion dollars. Some of them extended back a half-century.

Sponsored by six Republicans and four Democrats, the bill is expected to receive sufficient support for enactment regardless of administration claims that money from the fraction of collectible claims is needed to rehabilitate mental hospitals.

The House steps up committee hearings this 12th week of the session. That move follows last week's deadline for introduction of bills by representatives only.

The House Judiciary Committee expects to bring out a criminal conspiracy bill during the week, possibly Tuesday. The measure sought by Gov. Michael V. DiSalle would make it a felony to plot

Self-Responsibility Urged In Career Series Keynote

East Liverpool High School students were told today at the opening of the annual vocational conference program that they must accept the responsibility for growing up and acquire a sense of self-discipline and self-responsibility.

Keynoting the opening of the week-long program was Frank L. Maus, director of management development and training for the Weirton Steel Co., who addressed a general assembly at Memorial Auditorium. Kenneth Miller, Student Council president, presided.

Conferences on individual career opportunities in 47 fields will be held Tuesday through Friday with area business, professional and service representatives giving brief glimpses into the various vocations and answering questions.

Discussing a mother bear's care of her cubs and then her desertion to leave them on their own, the speaker pointed out Mother Nature makes it clear the only alternative animals have to the assumption of self-responsibility is death.

"But we humans seem to be getting the idea that we can outwit the Lord and Mother Nature and arrive at a way of living on this earth wherein nobody assumes responsibility for anything, least of all for his own personal behaviour and development."

Five guests were quickly routed out of bed and escaped. Lewis said the firemen were slowed in their initial attack on the fire as it was first thought that two men still were in their rooms.

The smoke was so dense the firemen had to don smoke masks, feel their way along the walls and then force their way into the rooms where the men were supposed to be. It was later learned one had escaped when the alarm was given and the second had not been at the hotel all night.

The hotel is operated by D. D. Chapel, 100 3rd St., Wellsville.

Seventeen firemen responded to the call.

2-Way Mishap On City Street Hurts Woman

Continuance Granted Motorist Cited For St. Clair Collision

An East Liverpool area woman was hospitalized this morning with injuries suffered in a traffic collision at St. Clair Ave. and Blackmore St.

Mrs. Sylvia Merriman, 26, of Birch Rd. was admitted to City Hospital for X-rays. Hospital attendants said she suffered possible neck and shoulder injuries.

The other driver, Mrs. Beulah Malkin, 57, of Curry St. was cited by police for failing to stop in the assured clear distance. She was taken into Municipal Court, but her case was continued until 3:30 p. m. Tuesday.

According to police, Mrs. Merriman had halted behind another car stopped to pick up a passenger when her car was rammed by Mrs. Malkin's 1959 sedan. Mrs. Malkin said she saw the front car slow but was unable to avoid the collision. The mishap was timed at 8:58 a. m.

The blinding rays of the sun were blamed for a collision at 7:12 a. m. at E. 2nd St. and Broadway.

Ralph Johnson, 65, of 203 W. 2nd St., told police he was crossing the railroad tracks but was blinded by the sun and cut too short, striking the stopped 1960 car driven by Clinton R. Alderman, 25, of Box 288 and owned by Eloise Joy, 1603 St. George St.

Charges of driving while under the influence of alcohol were filed against an 18-year-old Imperial (Pa.) youth as the aftermath of a collision Sunday at 2:10 a. m. on E. 3rd St. at Walnut St.

Herbert Auten was arrested after a collision that damaged his 1955 station wagon and a 1956 two-

Loss Of $100 Seen In Entry At Local Store

The owner of a downtown market was scheduled to complete a check late this afternoon to determine the amount of cash and merchandise taken in a burglary of his store Sunday night.

Police said the burglary of Alex's Carry-Out, 613 Jackson St., operated by James Cunningham Jr., 303 Moore St., was discovered at 11:15 last night by Patrolman K. H. Mooney while on routine patrol.

A cigar box containing currency was stolen from a desk drawer. Although Cunningham did not file a report on the loss with police, the family said it probably will total "less than $100."

The intruder gained entrance by hurling a stone through a 15-x-22-inch window on the southwest corner of the building. He ransacked the soft drink and frozen food cases, then went behind the counter to the desk and removed the box containing the money, police said.

Drawers built into the counter also were ransacked, but apparently nothing was taken. A brown paper bag containing a small amount in pennies was found on the floor at the rear of the store, near the window through which the burglar entered.

The cash register containing "a sizeable amount" in change apparently was left undisturbed, officers said. The intruder left via a door on the west side of the building, leaving the door open. Officer Mooney discovered the burglary when he found the door open.

The burglary apparently occured sometime after 8:30 Sunday night, when a member of the family went to the store to obtain some groceries, officers said. The store is closed from Saturday night until Monday morning.

Cunningham left for work early this morning at the Midland Works of the Crucible Steel Co. He is to make a definite check on the loss and file a report with police when he returns about 5 this afternoon.

Two other thefts were reported over the weekend.

Ross Jackson, 838 Spring Grove Ave., told police at 1:03 p. m. Saturday that a fire siren which he had stored in his garage was stloen sometime early last week.

A flasher unit and a barricade in use on the city freeway project were stolen Friday night or early Saturday, the Fishel Co. of Colum-

Prelate Defies Polish Regime Over Religion

Red Leaders Deny Persecution, Claim Roman Provocation

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—Hurling defiance at the Polish Communist regime, Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski pledged Sunday that the Roman Catholic Church will not bend to the Red "Caesars" in the mounting church-state struggle.

"I tell you Caesars that you will bow to your God and you will serve only him and no one else," the Polish primate declared. "Satan is mighty but man will not bow his head before him."

The cardinal's voice boomed through the high-vaulted Church of the Visitation as he declared that state-sponsored youth groups characterized by "atheization, laicization, indifferentism, rationalism, etc." show the Communist rulers are persecuting the church.

"It is so easily said that there is no struggle against religion," Cardinal Wyszynski said. "And what is this? What can one call this?"

House Vote Slated

Assembly Plan Would Cut Unpaid Mental Care Bills

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Complete revision of the state's system in collecting bills for care of mental patients is due for a vote in the Ohio House Wednesday.

The proposal would wipe out accounts incurred before Jan. 1, 1956, and base all collections on ability of relatives and others to pay. None would be liable in the future for care of full-time mental patients in institutions more than 15 years.

The measure grew out of protests last year over efforts by Gov. Michael V. DiSalle to clean up a backlog of more than 250,000 overdue accounts totaling a half-billion dollars. Some of them extended back a half-century.

Sponsored by six Republicans and four Democrats, the bill is expected to receive sufficient support for enactment regardless of administration claims that money from the fraction of collectible claims is needed to rehabilitate mental hospitals.

The House steps up committee hearings this 12th week of the session. That move follows last week's deadline for introduction of bills by representatives only.

The House Judiciary Committee expects to bring out a criminal conspiracy bill during the week, possibly Tuesday. The measure sought by Gov. Michael V. DiSalle would make it a felony to plot

ELHS Program Opens

Self-Responsibility Urged In Career Series Keynote

East Liverpool High School students were told today at the opening of the annual vocational conference program that they must accept the responsibility for growing up and acquire a sense of self-discipline and self-responsibility.

Keynoting the opening of the week-long program was Frank L. Maus, director of management development and training for the Weirton Steel Co., who addressed a general assembly at Memorial Auditorium. Kenneth Miller, Student Council president, presided.

Conferences on individual career opportunities in 47 fields will be held Tuesday through Friday with area business, professional and service representatives giving brief glimpses into the various vocations and answering questions.

Discussing a mother bear's care of her cubs and then her desertion to leave them on their own, the speaker pointed out Mother Nature makes it clear the only alternative animals have to the assumption of self-responsibility is death.

"But we humans seem to be getting the idea that we can outwit the Lord and Mother Nature and arrive at a way of living on this earth wherein nobody assumes responsibility for anything, least of all for his own personal behaviour and development."

Parents and teachers can pro-

Cited In Car Mishap

SALINEVILLE — Robert L. Smith of McKinley Ave., Carrollton, was cited for reckless operation after his car ran off W. Main St. on a curve Sunday night at 10:15.

Police Chief Cleo Mellott said the car halted just a few feet from the brink of a steep embankment.

Smith posted a $16 bond for a hearing tonight before Mayor Kenneth Leishman.

Keller E. Nixon of Dover forfeited a $16 bond when he failed to appear over the weekend before Leishman for a hearing on a charge of speeding.

Safe Robbery Suspect Flees

STEUBENVILLE — Jefferson County sheriff's deputies continued a search today for Edward Spenski, 48, of Pittsburgh — suspect in a $5,000 Weirton burglary — who was one of four men who escaped from the 74-year-old county Jail Sunday.

The other three were captured within a half hour. The men escaped early yesterday by sawing through the top tier of bars on their third floor cell, then walking down two flights to a window where bars had been broken off two weeks ago, according to Deputy Ray B. Long.

Spenski, being held here as a parole violator, has been charged in West Virginia with the $5,000 robbery of the Moose Hall in Weirton. He was arrested here but forfeited his $5,000 bond prior to an arraignment on extradition to West Virginia. Spenski then ran off and was recaptured in Pittsburgh and returned here. West Virginia authorities still would like to try him.

The other three escapees were Robert Confalone, 23, and Thomas Putnam, both held for breaking and entering; and John Manos, 25, awaiting trial on a charge of murdering his wife. All are from Steubenville.

Confalone and Putnam were found hiding in a ditch 100 yards from the jail. Manos was found a few minutes later in a parking lot across the street.

Safe With $500 Check Taken In East Palestine

A 400-pound safe containing a $500 check was stolen from the office of the Bosco Iron & Steel Co. at East Palestine Saturday night or early Sunday, Sheriff Russell J. VanFossan reported today at Lisbon.

The intruders gained entrance by breaking a panel in a back door and reaching through to manipulate the bolt. The safe then was rolled out the front door and loaded into a truck or car. John and Pete Bosco operate the scrap metal yard. They said nothing else was missing from the office.

Deputies also are investigating the theft of three big truck tires from a loaded tractor - trailer owned by William Mofield of Onward, Ind., while the big rig was parked from late Friday until Sunday noon at Brown's Restaurant on Route 14, just east of Route 170, near East Palestine. The driver, Robert Dobbin of Beaver, reported the theft to the sheriff's office.

42 Strays Destroyed At New Hancock Pound

About 42 stray dogs were destroyed this morning at Hancock County's new dog pound in Pughtown, which opened officially last week.

During visiting hours Sunday afternoon, homes were found for about 15 animals. Residents claimed the dogs by paying $4.50 in pound fees and also paying for licenses.

County commissioners said residents may visit the pound each Sunday afternoon from 1 to 4 to claim their choices from the many dogs which are collected throughout the county each week.

door sedan operated by William H. Carnegie, 20, of Richardson Ave.

Carnegie told police he halted his westbound auto to give the right-of-way to an auto turning off E. 3rd St. onto Walnut St. when Auten's auto slammed into his car from the rear. The tail light and rear bumper of Carnegie's car were damaged, police said.

Auten, a high school student, entered a not guilty plea today in Municipal Court through his counsel, Atty. Paul Tobin, and his hearing was continued until next Monday.

Judge Samuel M. Chertoff agreed to a $250 bond with the provision the youth's driver's permit be left with the court.

Auten's companion, Francis J. Craig of Clinton, was fined $10 and costs on an intoxication charge. He told Judge Chertoff they had purchased liquor in a tavern on Route 30 in Hancock County.

Meanwhile, Ronald Blystone, 232 E. 3rd St., told police the left rear fender of his 1953 two-door sedan was damaged by a hit-skip vehicle while parked on Union St. near E. 3rd St. Saturday night or early Sunday.

Cited In Car Mishap

SALINEVILLE — Robert L. Smith of McKinley Ave., Carrollton, was cited for reckless operation after his car ran off W. Main St. on a curve Sunday night at 10:15.

Police Chief Cleo Mellott said the car halted just a few feet from the brink of a steep embankment.

Smith posted a $16 bond for a hearing tonight before Mayor Kenneth Leishman.

Keller E. Nixon of Dover forfeited a $16 bond when he failed to appear over the weekend before Leishman for a hearing on a charge of speeding.

Safe Robbery Suspect Flees

STEUBENVILLE — Jefferson County sheriff's deputies continued a search today for Edward Spenski, 48, of Pittsburgh — suspect in a $5,000 Weirton burglary — who was one of four men who escaped from the 74-year-old county Jail Sunday.

The other three were captured within a half hour. The men escaped early yesterday by sawing through the top tier of bars on their third floor cell, then walking down two flights to a window where bars had been broken off two weeks ago, according to Deputy Ray B. Long.

Spenski, being held here as a parole violator, has been charged in West Virginia with the $5,000 robbery of the Moose Hall in Weirton. He was arrested here but forfeited his $5,000 bond prior to an arraignment on extradition to West Virginia. Spenski then ran off and was recaptured in Pittsburgh and returned here. West Virginia authorities still would like to try him.

The other three escapees were Robert Confalone, 23, and Thomas Putnam, both held for breaking and entering; and John Manos, 25, awaiting trial on a charge of murdering his wife. All are from Steubenville.

Confalone and Putnam were found hiding in a ditch 100 yards from the jail. Manos was found a few minutes later in a parking lot across the street.

Safe With $500 Check Taken In East Palestine

A 400-pound safe containing a $500 check was stolen from the office of the Bosco Iron & Steel Co. at East Palestine Saturday night or early Sunday, Sheriff Russell J. VanFossan reported today at Lisbon.

The intruders gained entrance by breaking a panel in a back door and reaching through to manipulate the bolt. The safe then was rolled out the front door and loaded into a truck or car. John and Pete Bosco operate the scrap metal yard. They said nothing else was missing from the office.

Deputies also are investigating the theft of three big truck tires from a loaded tractor - trailer owned by William Mofield of Onward, Ind., while the big rig was parked from late Friday until Sunday noon at Brown's Restaurant on Route 14, just east of Route 170, near East Palestine. The driver, Robert Dobbin of Beaver, reported the theft to the sheriff's office.

42 Strays Destroyed At New Hancock Pound

About 42 stray dogs were destroyed this morning at Hancock County's new dog pound in Pughtown, which opened officially last week.

During visiting hours Sunday afternoon, homes were found for about 15 animals. Residents claimed the dogs by paying $4.50 in pound fees and also paying for licenses.

County commissioners said residents may visit the pound each Sunday afternoon from 1 to 4 to claim their choices from the many dogs which are collected throughout the county each week.

door sedan operated by William H. Carnegie, 20, of Richardson Ave.

Carnegie told police he halted his westbound auto to give the right-of-way to an auto turning off E. 3rd St. onto Walnut St. when Auten's auto slammed into his car from the rear. The tail light and rear bumper of Carnegie's car were damaged, police said.

Auten, a high school student, entered a not guilty plea today in Municipal Court through his counsel, Atty. Paul Tobin, and his hearing was continued until next Monday.

Judge Samuel M. Chertoff agreed to a $250 bond with the provision the youth's driver's permit be left with the court.

Auten's companion, Francis J. Craig of Clinton, was fined $10 and costs on an intoxication charge. He told Judge Chertoff they had purchased liquor in a tavern on Route 30 in Hancock County.

Meanwhile, Ronald Blystone, 232 E. 3rd St., told police the left rear fender of his 1953 two-door sedan was damaged by a hit-skip vehicle while parked on Union St. near E. 3rd St. Saturday night or early Sunday.

Two Ways To Aid Education

There is great danger in the issue over federal aid to parochial schools of blurring the definition of terms.

An illustration is the difference in the support of public and parochial schools under existing arrangements. Except for a few exceptions, such as the federal milk program and school bus transportation in some places, parochial school pupils are supported only by those who have a special interest in their religious education. There is no public tax for their support.

Public schools, on the other hand, are supported by taxation.

All taxpayers share responsibility for their cost.

Many taxpayers go beyond this involuntary support to contribute money voluntarily to education. Some choose to send their children to private schools, instead of public schools, yet they do not ask to be relieved of this voluntary burden by public assistance.

Some parents take advantage of tax-supported universities to educate their children at the college level. Other parents, for various reasons, send their children to private colleges and universities, without asking that their fellow citizens help them or the universities. It is at this very point, of course, that federal aid to education becomes self-defeating for administrators and educators of private schools tempted to grab for the federal money. They are in danger of selling out their students, their alumni and their friends for a crack at the U.S. Treasury.

They must choose to be one or the other —public or private educators. Once they start to take public money, they can say goodbye to the contributors who have made private education possible. It is a powerful argument for defeating federal aid to education. The power of the purse cannot be thwarted in the long run. Private education, including parochial schools, themselves, cannot long survive federal handouts.

Of the more than six million elementary and high school pupils in nonpublic schools, more than five million are in Roman Catholic schools. The pressure of this student bloc is chiefly responsible for the present issue over federal aid to education. Influential Catholic spokesmen say federal loans must be made available to Catholic schools, or they will oppose federal aid to all schools. This would have the effect of killing federal aid. Those who want it most may make it impossible.

Catholics, themselves, are divided on the issue. President Kennedy believes federal aid to parochial schools would be unconstitutional.

The terms of the issue must be kept clear. Schools for the benefit of all are supported by taxation; everybody is taxed to keep them in operation.

People who voluntarily support nonpublic schools support these schools in many ways —but their contributions are voluntary. They are not taxes.

Lately, there has been a tendency to speak of their contributions as being an obligation, like taxes. It has been asserted that they should not be required to pay twice for education.

They are not required to pay twice. They are taxed only for public schools. What they choose to pay beyond that is their own business, whether they choose to support Roman Catholic schools, Lutheran schools, private schools in the South to escape integration, or church colleges instead of nonsectarian tax-supported universities.

There must be no confusion between contributions and taxes — between voluntary and involuntary aid to education.

Exodus Of Southern Negroes

Preliminary census figures show continuation of the shift in Negro population that has bemused sociologists for half a century.

In 1910, the 11 states of the southern Confederacy had 81 per cent of the Negroes in the United States. In 1930, the proportion had dropped to 71 per cent. In 1950 it had dropped another 11 per cent, to 60 per cent.

In the 1960 census, only 52 per cent of the nation's 18,871,381 Negroes lived in the 11 Confederate states.

New York had added the greatest number of Negroes — half a million since 1950 when it trailed Georgia, North Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama and Texas in Negro population. It had 1,417,511 last year.

Texas, Georgia, North Carolina, Louisiana and Illinois had more than a million Negroes apiece in their population. Wyoming, Mississippi and Arkansas have lost Negro population since 1950.

Nationally, the Negro population in 1960 was 10.5 per cent of the total population in 50 states and the District of Columbia, slightly more than the gain shown by the total population.

No one has claimed the exodus of Negroes from the South will solve the problem of their assimilation. That would be preposterous in the light of the problems that have been created in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland and, more recently, Los Angeles, where they have settled in unwieldy masses.

But sociologists have been aware for a generation that the problem of discrimination has been eased for millions of southern Negroes by the simple expedient of going somewhere else. The new problems created in the process have been of only secondary concern to Negroes.

It can only be conjectured that in the states Negroes have been leaving in the greatest numbers there will be new problems too, some of them as hard to solve as the problems created when Negroes ceased to be slaves and became citizens. Negroes have done the South's hard work for generations.

Some Must Lose

As tense as any athletic contest are the spelling bees now in progress throughout the county.

Not only the spellers, but their parents, teachers and others in their corner experience many anxious moments during a bee. And, as in baseball, football, basketball or any other form of competition, there has to be a winner and a loser.

So if you trip on a tricky word and don't finish first, take it in stride. Regardless of how far you advance, you can be sure of this — you're a better speller for having participated. And good spelling is an essential part of any well-rounded education.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Another place famed for its memories of thrills, laughs and general fun is getting bumped off. It is the Polo Grounds, soon to make room for a housing project. The homes that rise there could be so filled with ghosts of baseball heroes that apartments over the infield might be haunted by athletic "greats" of the past.

If we were a tenant we are sure we would trace disturbing noises to spirits of John McGraw, Christy Mathewson and hosts of others who made life extra exciting.

We would hear memorable ruckuses between umps and fiery players. No sleeping pill would keep us from recurrent glimpses of Jack Dempsey getting knocked out of the ring by Luis Firpo and crawling back to murder the Argentinian.

Adequate housing is more important than ball fields but the death of a great baseball park, where generations found happiness and relaxation, is pretty tragic. "Home Sweet Home" is a more important theme song, but "Take Me Out To The Ball Game" has its heart appeal.

We saw our first big league ball game in the Polo Grounds, reaching it by the long descent and ascent up what seemed a five-mile stairway from Coogan's Bluff.

The Yanks played there, too, and Babe Ruth was our idol, with Frankie Frisch running close up.

When a great ball park dies, there should be tender ceremonials. Compassion should have a time at bat before steamshovels and bulldozers move in from bullpens.

There should be a singing of sad songs together with the national anthem, a recitation of "Casey at the Bat" and features of an old-fashioned wake with free beer and sandwiches. (It would be permissible to boo Boards of Estimate, hiss architects and cry "Take the bum out" at project developers.)

"I am for President Kennedy's Peace Corps as first outlined but I am alarmed by suggestions for spreading it too fast and too loosely," writes Jarvis Munch, a year out of college and baffled by what to do with his sense of social service.

"I see where there is talk of the corps working in American slums and depressed areas, with Mrs. Roosevelt deeply interested. She is a dedicated lady but has a tendency to cover too much territory and I would be afraid Peace Corps volunteers might fit themselves for work among primitive people and find themselves assigned to save our forests, stop beach erosion, build superhighways and provide a better life for Florida tourists compelled to live in a hotel over two seasons old.

"I would not want to join a Peace Corps to help spread a true picture of America to faraway places and get assigned to a job in the United States making people happier through amateur theatricals.

"Who wants to bone up on native tongues in the Congo or Ceylon and get a job in a Pittsburgh depressed zone or New York slum? How would I feel if I had trained to live in mud huts, eat the food of jungle tribes, enjoy raw fish and betel nuts and got switched to the Bowery, baked beans and assorted U.S. dialects?

"There is important work to be done in the slums and in depressed areas, but is it for Peace Corpsmen? I hope Mr. Kennedy clarifies the situation, so any young man desiring to work for world peace through restoring American prestige, and gaining the confidence of faraway nations, won't find himself fighting juvenile delinquency in Chicago, or vice versa. He could get too mixed up."

New selection for governor of Virgin Islands, Ralph Paiewonsky, comes of Russian family which settled on islands. He was born there but went to Brooklyn high school and New York University. He is multi-millionaire operating big distillery and many other businesses.

The Human X-15

Labor's Duty To Public Emphasized

By Victor Riesel

"Burning Daylight" is the nickname of the hero of a Jack London novel because he moved so rapidly between sunup and sundown I steal this phrase now so I can dub the secretary of labor of the U. S. "Burning Daylight Goldberg." If he maintains his pace he will have talked personally to all the millions in the American labor movement long before '62.

Victor Riesel

However, it isn't merely whom he sees, it's what he tells them informally, which is generally unreported, that is making national history. And I use that word advisedly.

Last Monday, for example, Arthur Goldberg did what no other Cabinet member ever has done. He dashed into New York City to talk to 60 people in the Little Theater of the Hotel Barbizon Plaza.

Most of them were rank-and-file union members making up the Wage Policy Committee of the Communications Workers of America (CWA).

These 60 men and women, representing some 350,000 telephone workers, had gathered to decide how much of a pay raise they would seek of the communications companies this spring.

Since the CWA will be the first of the big unions to go for a wage hike under the John Kennedy administration, let's look at this unique bargaining group.

Unlike other wage policy committees, this is not made up of officials. The union is divided into 10 regions. Each has a representative.

IN ADDITION, the voice of the people is heard from some 35 rank and filers elected on the basis of one for every 8,000 members.

Thus, when Goldberg came at the invitation of his very good friend, CWA President Joe Beirne, a labor leader whose integrity matches his clean and imaginative leadership, the secretary of labor was briefing men and women who work on the long lines, on repairs and maintenance and in the automatic telephone exchanges.

It was a closed session. What Mr. Goldberg said, in effect, was that this union in particular and labor in general had great responsibility now to act not only in its own interests but in the interests of the people and the nation.

He did not tell them to keep their wage demands low but to keep their sense of responsibility high in this hour of recession and cold war competition with the Soviets.

It was, as one listener put it, a "nice, sophisticated Fourth of July speech."

Others inside the auditorium interpreted it to mean — try to avoid crisis now, try to keep out of any situation which could result in wide strikes.

THE CWA has special responsibilities because it is a white collar union. It is characteristic of the newly developing white collar work force.

It is in a highly automated industry. It has a duty, therefore, to all the public to launch a pilot study of the benefits and burdens of automation.

This theme of labor's duty to the public appears to be Arthur Goldberg's motif. Last Monday he hit it four times in several cities.

Early in the day he spoke in Philadelphia at the Hotel and Restaurant Workers 38th general convention.

I take it for granted that my friend "Burning Daylight" knew that some locals of this international union have been in the paws of the mob. For what he said on that platform, just before heading for New York, should not be lost to the rest of the nation:

"One traitor," said Goldberg, "can destroy the security of a nation; a handful of people in positions of great economic and political power can bring such moral ruin to a people as to make them extinct — gone down into history's slag heap with others who found that a nation's momentum runs quickly down without the external stimulus of great spiritual and moral challenge."

GOLDBERG was referring here to abuses in all sections of our economic and government life over the past years.

"What we need, above all, at this time is ethical acknowledgment and ethical leadership from those whom the world considers hard headed and practical. We need a clear acceptance of the idea that the ethical principle is not to be confined to the synagogue, the chapel and the church.

"The American labor leader must be prepared to view as a privilege the opportunity to bear the weight of moral obligation accruing to any position of high leadership. . . ."

After Philadelphia and New York, Goldberg burned up the evening air to Chicago, where news awaited him of a threatened strike in the Hanford (Wash.) section of our atomic energy complex. Before tumbling into bed, he reminded all that there is the vast American public.

Dear Nephew: Nothing flatters an old goat like me half so much as being asked to reveal his secret to the impressionable young. They let me talk to the kiddies at the centralized school today.

Actually, they let me talk to some of the kids. It was Career Day. They split the children into groups, depending on what they think they want to start to commence to begin to plan to be. Each group was talked to by a successful adult.

They had a doctor, a lawyer, a soldier, an architect, a manufacturer and so on. It was just a cross-section, but the idea was to hit the high points. They didn't have a preacher, but they had a nurse to tell girls about that kind of a career. They didn't have a space man, but they had me.

My assignment was to tell boys and girls who didn't know what they wanted to be how they could end up being like me. I was the horrible example. My job was to scare the darlings half out of their wits, so they could go through life being happy though half-witted, like me.

There is a need for this sort of thing — I mean the sort of thing I am. Almost none of the children will be any of the things that are talked about on Career Day.

Most of the girls will be mothers; that will be all the career they'll have, but does anyone ever think of calling in a mother to tell the young ladies the tricks of that humdrum occupation?

Most of the boys will be what I call working stiffs, meaning they will plug away at one thing or another all their lives, trying to keep their heads above water and feed, clothe and house a family. There will be no planning and no premeditation about the jobs they will do.

I know maybe eight doctors, lawyers and preachers. I know a couple soldiers and many school teachers. I personally know no one in the entertainment business, the flying business, missile business, or high finance. I know a few bankers and manufacturers, but mostly I know people who work in shops, do handy jobs, drive trucks, sell real estate, clerk in stores, repair roofs, run restaurants, toil in filling stations — people like that.

They get the world's work done, but they didn't plan to do what they're doing, and their replacements won't plan it either. I do not mean it's wrong to make plans. I mean everybody should be aware of the probability the plans will be scuttled by events beyond their control if they make them.

That was where I came in handy for Career Day at the centralized school. I told the young people how to come up on the bounce.

I told them how I was being prepared for a brilliant career in medicine but was too stupid to get through chemistry. I told them how I flubbed it when I was getting ready to be a school teacher, because I couldn't make any sense of educationism. I still can't. Then I began to carve out a success story in manufacturing, but repetition gave me the willies; I was bored stiff with manufacturing.

I tried selling, but I was too soft. The customers didn't believe me, and I didn't know how to convince them. I had a crack at the lumber business, but I gave that up when I proved to be allergic to yellow pine splinters.

Everything I tried to do proved to be something I didn't think I would like to do longer than a few months at the most. It was all right for a change — but, like New York City, I wouldn't want to live there.

So I told these young ones today how I went from pillar to post and from post to pot until I came to the end of a misspent life with nothing to show for it but a good appetite, a paid-for house, a lucky wife (to have me) and an invitation to say a few words from time to time at the centralized school where the old are generous enough to share their secrets with the young.

Kennedy And Ike

By James Marlow

Presidential Differences Become Clearer

WASHINGTON

President Kennedy has been in office long enough, two months today, to show some basic differences, sharp or subtle, between his administration and President Eisenhower's.

Kennedy has begun his presidency with far greater vigor and more detailed knowledge of government and its problems than Eisenhower displayed in his early period.

In one way the two are similar —both are moderates—although that just about ends the similarity.

While Eisenhower was willing to go along with some changes—such as medical care for the aged, federal aid to education, or increasing the minimum wage—he seemed to want to keep changes to a minimum.

He would not, for instance, ever agree to boosting the minimum wage to $1.25 an hour, or tie medical care for the aged to Social Security, or give federal aid to teachers. Kennedy wants to in all three cases.

Eisenhower, true to his Army training, liked the chain of command system which lets subordinates argue details and differences and then bring him their decision for a yes or no.

Kennedy is a brain-picker, far more accessible than Eisenhower, he takes part in staff conferences, quizzes all he can, likes arguments and, having heard them, decides.

Eisenhower, with small liking for politics, had an impractical political concept of the president's role in dealing with Congress. He liked to hand Congress his programs and then stand back.

Kennedy, with 14 years in Congress, knows better. He and his aides get up to their necks in trying to line up votes in the Capitol for their programs.

The need for such direct action is apparent enough while Kennedy so far has been successful in getting what he wants it has been by chillingly close vote.

Kennedy has an alertness in his job which Eisenhower didn't show. Where Eisenhower hardly ever read newspapers, except on Sundays, Kennedy reads them in bunches every day.

This is part of his desire to know as much as he can about events, public thinking, and details of the problems he has to handle.

The new President seems determined to assert himself both as boss and spokesman for his administration.

The late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles was, in effect, American foreign policy through the years he served in the Eisenhower administration. He made the big statements, including some provocative, some harsh, some bombastic.

Judging from the way Dean Rusk now operates as secretary of state, Dulles would have been less heard from if Kennedy had been president in his time.

Rusk acts like a foreign affairs technician, quietly behind the scenes with friend and foe, leaving it to Kennedy to make the big speeches and announce the big decisions.

People high in the administration say the government is more relaxed now — a quicker and easier communication among the agencies and between the agencies and the White House.

The big unknown about Kennedy is in foreign affairs. He doesn't needlessly irritate the Russians. But he doesn't coddle them, either. The mystery is in his programs and his long-range thinking.

How far will he go to keep Laos from falling to communism? How far will he go in wanting an end to colonialism, even if it means alienating or offending allies?

His program of aid for Latin America, while it sounds big and noble, is still so vague that its full implications cannot be understood until he says and does more about it.

Prescription For GOP

By Raymond Moley

The first political statement since the election by Richard M. Nixon was made the other day before the Republican State Committee in Sacramento, Calif.

In that and in a private meeting with Republican members of the California legislature, he made a number of points which bear heavily upon his carefully considered personal political plans and ideas.

Since it has been widely reported, mostly outside of California, that he would seek the governorship of California in 1962 as a step toward his nomination for president in 1964 he cleared that up.

It should be obvious to anyone who knows California politics that if he should run for governor and be elected he would have to bar himself as a candidate in 1964.

There are two reasons for that.

CALIFORNIANS would so strongly resent his seeking the governorship that unless he clearly ruled himself out for 1964, tens of thousands would vote against him.

Earl Warren, whose political acumen has never been doubted, was asked in 1944 by Thomas E. Dewey to accept the vice presidential nomination. Warren refused on these grounds. He had been elected in 1942 to bring back good government in Sacramento after a term by an unpopular Democratic governor.

Another factor influencing Nixon in his attitude toward the governorship is that he considers the rehabilitation of the Republican party organization over the nation as so important that the heavy duties of the governorship would impair his efforts in that direction.

Therefore he said that he was not and would not be a candidate for governor in 1962 and would not encourage any draft.

Sen. Barry Goldwater commented after the Nixon statement that "until he gets elected to some position he (Nixon) will be just another Republican lawyer."

GOLDWATER must have overlooked the foregoing considerations which prevail so definitely in California. Also he dismisses the important point which Nixon regards as paramount, that unless the Republican party is stronger in 1964 than in 1960 the Republican nomination for president will not be worth seeking.

The ends for which Nixon, as a private citizen well-known over the nation, will labor he outlined as follows:

Volunteer auxiliaries are essential to Republican success. Those volunteers must be organized on a permanent basis. And there must be close cooperation between such volunteers and the regular Republican organization.

There should be a nationwide talent hunt for attractive Republican candidates for all offices at every level. Attention should be given to getting young prospects and student groups actively into politics.

LABOR LEADERS at the local level should be appealed to as Republican prospects. These people, Nixon said, are tired of being taken for granted by the big international union leadership.

Since the fastest growing areas in the United States are in the suburbs and in the nonfarming areas near big urban centers, the organization by the Republicans should be more actively organized to overcome traditional Democratic majorities in the large cities in the North and West.

The situation is different in the South where Republican strength was greatest in the cities in 1960.

Nixon can perform a great service to the two-party system by bringing out these facts to those who voted for him over the country in 1960. There are, it should be remembered, more than 34 million of them.

Two Ways To Aid Education

There is great danger in the issue over federal aid to parochial schools of blurring the definition of terms.

An illustration is the difference in the support of public and parochial schools under existing arrangements. Except for a few exceptions, such as the federal milk program and school bus transportation in some places, parochial school pupils are supported only by those who have a special interest in their religious education. There is no public tax for their support.

Public schools, on the other hand, are supported by taxation.

All taxpayers share responsibility for their cost.

Many taxpayers go beyond this involuntary support to contribute money voluntarily to education. Some choose to send their children to private schools, instead of public schools, yet they do not ask to be relieved of this voluntary burden by public assistance.

Some parents take advantage of tax-supported universities to educate their children at the college level. Other parents, for various reasons, send their children to private colleges and universities, without asking that their fellow citizens help them or the universities. It is at this very point, of course, that federal aid to education becomes self-defeating for administrators and educators of private schools tempted to grab for the federal money. They are in danger of selling out their students, their alumni and their friends for a crack at the U.S. Treasury.

They must choose to be one or the other —public or private educators. Once they start to take public money, they can say goodbye to the contributors who have made private education possible. It is a powerful argument for defeating federal aid to education. The power of the purse cannot be thwarted in the long run. Private education, including parochial schools, themselves, cannot long survive federal handouts.

Of the more than six million elementary and high school pupils in nonpublic schools, more than five million are in Roman Catholic schools. The pressure of this student bloc is chiefly responsible for the present issue over federal aid to education. Influential Catholic spokesmen say federal loans must be made available to Catholic schools, or they will oppose federal aid to all schools. This would have the effect of killing federal aid. Those who want it most may make it impossible.

Catholics, themselves, are divided on the issue. President Kennedy believes federal aid to parochial schools would be unconstitutional.

The terms of the issue must be kept clear. Schools for the benefit of all are supported by taxation; everybody is taxed to keep them in operation.

People who voluntarily support nonpublic schools support these schools in many ways —but their contributions are voluntary. They are not taxes.

Lately, there has been a tendency to speak of their contributions as being an obligation, like taxes. It has been asserted that they should not be required to pay twice for education.

They are not required to pay twice. They are taxed only for public schools. What they choose to pay beyond that is their own business, whether they choose to support Roman Catholic schools, Lutheran schools, private schools in the South to escape integration, or church colleges instead of nonsectarian tax-supported universities.

There must be no confusion between contributions and taxes — between voluntary and involuntary aid to education.

Exodus Of Southern Negroes

Preliminary census figures show continuation of the shift in Negro population that has bemused sociologists for half a century.

In 1910, the 11 states of the southern Confederacy had 81 per cent of the Negroes in the United States. In 1930, the proportion had dropped to 71 per cent. In 1950 it had dropped another 11 per cent, to 60 per cent.

In the 1960 census, only 52 per cent of the nation's 18,871,381 Negroes lived in the 11 Confederate states.

New York had added the greatest number of Negroes — half a million since 1950 when it trailed Georgia, North Carolina, Mississippi, Alabama and Texas in Negro population. It had 1,417,511 last year.

Texas, Georgia, North Carolina, Louisiana and Illinois had more than a million Negroes apiece in their population. Wyoming, Mississippi and Arkansas have lost Negro population since 1950.

Nationally, the Negro population in 1960 was 10.5 per cent of the total population in 50 states and the District of Columbia, slightly more than the gain shown by the total population.

No one has claimed the exodus of Negroes from the South will solve the problem of their assimilation. That would be preposterous in the light of the problems that have been created in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland and, more recently, Los Angeles, where they have settled in unwieldy masses.

But sociologists have been aware for a generation that the problem of discrimination has been eased for millions of southern Negroes by the simple expedient of going somewhere else. The new problems created in the process have been of only secondary concern to Negroes.

It can only be conjectured that in the states Negroes have been leaving in the greatest numbers there will be new problems too, some of them as hard to solve as the problems created when Negroes ceased to be slaves and became citizens. Negroes have done the South's hard work for generations.

Some Must Lose

As tense as any athletic contest are the spelling bees now in progress throughout the county.

Not only the spellers, but their parents, teachers and others in their corner experience many anxious moments during a bee. And, as in baseball, football, basketball or any other form of competition, there has to be a winner and a loser.

So if you trip on a tricky word and don't finish first, take it in stride. Regardless of how far you advance, you can be sure of this — you're a better speller for having participated. And good spelling is an essential part of any well-rounded education.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Another place famed for its memories of thrills, laughs and general fun is getting bumped off. It is the Polo Grounds, soon to make room for a housing project. The homes that rise there could be so filled with ghosts of baseball heroes that apartments over the infield might be haunted by athletic "greats" of the past.

If we were a tenant we are sure we would trace disturbing noises to spirits of John McGraw, Christy Mathewson and hosts of others who made life extra exciting.

We would hear memorable ruckuses between umps and fiery players. No sleeping pill would keep us from recurrent glimpses of Jack Dempsey getting knocked out of the ring by Luis Firpo and crawling back to murder the Argentinian.

Adequate housing is more important than ball fields but the death of a great baseball park, where generations found happiness and relaxation, is pretty tragic. "Home Sweet Home" is a more important theme song, but "Take Me Out To The Ball Game" has its heart appeal.

We saw our first big league ball game in the Polo Grounds, reaching it by the long descent and ascent up what seemed a five-mile stairway from Coogan's Bluff.

The Yanks played there, too, and Babe Ruth was our idol, with Frankie Frisch running close up.

When a great ball park dies, there should be tender ceremonials. Compassion should have a time at bat before steamshovels and bulldozers move in from bullpens.

There should be a singing of sad songs together with the national anthem, a recitation of "Casey at the Bat" and features of an old-fashioned wake with free beer and sandwiches. (It would be permissible to boo Boards of Estimate, hiss architects and cry "Take the bum out" at project developers.)

"I am for President Kennedy's Peace Corps as first outlined but I am alarmed by suggestions for spreading it too fast and too loosely," writes Jarvis Munch, a year out of college and baffled by what to do with his sense of social service.

"I see where there is talk of the corps working in American slums and depressed areas, with Mrs. Roosevelt deeply interested. She is a dedicated lady but has a tendency to cover too much territory and I would be afraid Peace Corps volunteers might fit themselves for work among primitive people and find themselves assigned to save our forests, stop beach erosion, build superhighways and provide a better life for Florida tourists compelled to live in a hotel over two seasons old.

"I would not want to join a Peace Corps to help spread a true picture of America to faraway places and get assigned to a job in the United States making people happier through amateur theatricals.

"Who wants to bone up on native tongues in the Congo or Ceylon and get a job in a Pittsburgh depressed zone or New York slum? How would I feel if I had trained to live in mud huts, eat the food of jungle tribes, enjoy raw fish and betel nuts and got switched to the Bowery, baked beans and assorted U.S. dialects?

"There is important work to be done in the slums and in depressed areas, but is it for Peace Corpsmen? I hope Mr. Kennedy clarifies the situation, so any young man desiring to work for world peace through restoring American prestige, and gaining the confidence of faraway nations, won't find himself fighting juvenile delinquency in Chicago, or vice versa. He could get too mixed up."

New selection for governor of Virgin Islands, Ralph Paiewonsky, comes of Russian family which settled on islands. He was born there but went to Brooklyn high school and New York University. He is multi-millionaire operating big distillery and many other businesses.

Labor's Duty To Public Emphasized

By Victor Riesel

"Burning Daylight" is the nickname of the hero of a Jack London novel because he moved so rapidly between sunup and sundown I steal this phrase now so I can dub the secretary of labor of the U. S. "Burning Daylight Goldberg." If he maintains his pace he will have talked personally to all the millions in the American labor movement long before '62.

Victor Riesel

However, it isn't merely whom he sees, it's what he tells them informally, which is generally unreported, that is making national history. And I use that word advisedly.

Last Monday, for example, Arthur Goldberg did what no other Cabinet member ever has done. He dashed into New York City to talk to 60 people in the Little Theater of the Hotel Barbizon Plaza.

Most of them were rank-and-file union members making up the Wage Policy Committee of the Communications Workers of America (CWA).

These 60 men and women, representing some 350,000 telephone workers, had gathered to decide how much of a pay raise they would seek of the communications companies this spring.

Since the CWA will be the first of the big unions to go for a wage hike under the John Kennedy administration, let's look at this unique bargaining group.

Unlike other wage policy committees, this is not made up of officials. The union is divided into 10 regions. Each has a representative.

IN ADDITION, the voice of the people is heard from some 35 rank and filers elected on the basis of one for every 8,000 members.

Thus, when Goldberg came at the invitation of his very good friend, CWA President Joe Beirne, a labor leader whose integrity matches his clean and imaginative leadership, the secretary of labor was briefing men and women who work on the long lines, on repairs and maintenance and in the automatic telephone exchanges.

He would not, for instance, ever agree to boosting the minimum wage to $1.25 an hour, or tie medical care for the aged to Social Security, or give federal aid to teachers. Kennedy wants to in all three cases.

Eisenhower, true to his Army training, liked the chain of command system which lets subordinates argue details and differences and then bring him their decision for a yes or no.

Kennedy is a brain-picker, far more accessible than Eisenhower, he takes part in staff conferences, quizzes all he can, likes arguments and, having heard them, decides.

Eisenhower, with small liking for politics, had an impractical political concept of the president's role in dealing with Congress. He liked to hand Congress his programs and then stand back.

Kennedy, with 14 years in Congress, knows better. He and his aides get up to their necks in trying to line up votes in the Capitol for their programs.

The need for such direct action is apparent enough while Kennedy so far has been successful in getting what he wants it has been by chillingly close vote.

Kennedy has an alertness in his job which Eisenhower didn't show. Where Eisenhower hardly ever read newspapers, except on Sundays, Kennedy reads them in bunches every day.

This is part of his desire to know as much as he can about events, public thinking, and details of the problems he has to handle.

The new President seems determined to assert himself both as boss and spokesman for his administration.

The late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles was, in effect, American foreign policy through the years he served in the Eisenhower administration. He made the big statements, including some provocative, some harsh, some bombastic.

Judging from the way Dean Rusk now operates as secretary of state, Dulles would have been less heard from if Kennedy had been president in his time.

Rusk acts like a foreign affairs technician, quietly behind the scenes with friend and foe, leaving it to Kennedy to make the big speeches and announce the big decisions.

People high in the administration say the government is more relaxed now — a quicker and easier communication among the agencies and between the agencies and the White House.

The big unknown about Kennedy is in foreign affairs. He doesn't needlessly irritate the Russians. But he doesn't coddle them, either. The mystery is in his programs and his long-range thinking.

How far will he go to keep Laos from falling to communism? How far will he go in wanting an end to colonialism, even if it means alienating or offending allies?

His program of aid for Latin America, while it sounds big and noble, is still so vague that its full implications cannot be understood until he says and does more about it.

Prescription For GOP

By Raymond Moley

The first political statement since the election by Richard M. Nixon was made the other day before the Republican State Committee in Sacramento, Calif.

In that and in a private meeting with Republican members of the California legislature, he made a number of points which bear heavily upon his carefully considered personal political plans and ideas.

Since it has been widely reported, mostly outside of California, that he would seek the governorship of California in 1962 as a step toward his nomination for president in 1964 he cleared that up.

It should be obvious to anyone who knows California politics that if he should run for governor and be elected he would have to bar himself as a candidate in 1964.

There are two reasons for that.

CALIFORNIANS would so strongly resent his seeking the governorship that unless he clearly ruled himself out for 1964, tens of thousands would vote against him.

Earl Warren, whose political acumen has never been doubted, was asked in 1944 by Thomas E. Dewey to accept the vice presidential nomination. Warren refused on these grounds. He had been elected in 1942 to bring back good government in Sacramento after a term by an unpopular Democratic governor.

Another factor influencing Nixon in his attitude toward the governorship is that he considers the rehabilitation of the Republican party organization over the nation as so important that the heavy duties of the governorship would impair his efforts in that direction.

Therefore he said that he was not and would not be a candidate for governor in 1962 and would not encourage any draft.

Sen. Barry Goldwater commented after the Nixon statement that "until he gets elected to some position he (Nixon) will be just another Republican lawyer."

GOLDWATER must have overlooked the foregoing considerations which prevail so definitely in California. Also he dismisses the important point which Nixon regards as paramount, that unless the Republican party is stronger in 1964 than in 1960 the Republican nomination for president will not be worth seeking.

The ends for which Nixon, as a private citizen well-known over the nation, will labor he outlined as follows:

Volunteer auxiliaries are essential to Republican success. Those volunteers must be organized on a permanent basis. And there must be close cooperation between such volunteers and the regular Republican organization.

There should be a nationwide talent hunt for attractive Republican candidates for all offices at every level. Attention should be given to getting young prospects and student groups actively into politics.

LABOR LEADERS at the local level should be appealed to as Republican prospects. These people, Nixon said, are tired of being taken for granted by the big international union leadership.

Since the fastest growing areas in the United States are in the suburbs and in the nonfarming areas near big urban centers, the organization by the Republicans should be more actively organized to overcome traditional Democratic majorities in the large cities in the North and West.

The situation is different in the South where Republican strength was greatest in the cities in 1960.

Nixon can perform a great service to the two-party system by bringing out these facts to those who voted for him over the country in 1960. There are, it should be remembered, more than 34 million of them.

Camp Event's Date Changed

The executive committee of the Board of Trustees of the Beaver Creek United Presbyterian Camp held a special meeting Saturday at the camp to change the date for an "open house" and to discuss installation of water facilities.

Because of a conflict in dates in the Steubenville Presbytery, the open house and dedication of the new kitchen and dining hall was changed from April 22 to May 28.

The Rev. Mark Allen chairman of the development committee, of Toronto is chairman of the event. Invitations and publicity will be mailed to all churches of the Steubenville and Mahoning Presbyteries. The decision was reached to install a new water tank and pump for this summer, but to wait until Fall to install a new water line.

Robert Hummer of Girard, chairman, presided. He opened the meeting with prayer.

Other members present were the Rev. Boyd Burd of Kensington, chairman of the administration committee; Mrs. Donald Baxter of East Liverpool, registrar - secretary; the Rev. Richard Fruit of Lake Milton and the Rev. Gene Phlegar of Bergholz, chairman and co-chairman of the program committee; Stanley Rose of East Liverpool, co-chairman of the development committee; Cliff Aitken of Brilliant and Raymond Brubaker of Columbiana, chairman and co-chairman of operations committee, and George Reynolds, caretaker of the camp.

The meeting closed with prayer by Hummer. The trustees will meet April 15 at 1:20 p. m. at the camp.

Teamster Figure Gets Jail Release In Appeal Mixup

CLEVELAND (AP) — William Presser, head of the Teamsters Union in Ohio, is free after spending five days in jail improperly, according to the U. S. Bureau of Prisons.

Presser lost a Supreme Court appeal last month for a hearing on his contempt of Congress conviction for which he was to serve 60 days plus a fine of $100. He then asked to be jailed last Monday.

U. S. Marshal Albert J. Jacobs locked up Presser in the Cuyahoga County jail, where short-term prisoners often are kept, and sent to Washington for Presser's commitment papers.

Jacobs received a reply Saturday from Myrl E. Alexander, an assistant director of the Bureau of Prisons, a telegram stating Presser was "improperly in custody" and should be released immedately. He was.

Presser's Washington attorney, H. Clifford Allder, had filed for a rehearing before the Supreme Court. Allder said Presser had knowledge of the new appeal. A man cannot be jailed while an appeal is pending.

Alexander said the sentence court would have to decide whether the five days should be subtracted from the full sentence.

Presser, 52, was convicted Feb. 2, 1960 in Washington for refusing to say whether he had destroyed personal or union records subpoenaed by the U. S. Senate rackets committee.

Produce Seen Well Stocked

Produce counters are well stocked with fresh vegetables from the warmer producing areas, Richard Skinner, marketing agent with the Co-operative Extension Service in Canfield, reports.

Among the most economical choices this week are cabbage, dry onions, broccoli, head lettuce and celery. Quality has been very good. The green cabbage found on local markets is from Florida while the white is from northern storage.

Ample supplies of potatoes continue in prospect. A good storage stock of fall potatoes with the winter crop of new potatoes from Florida now being marketed assures a continued supply of this staple at economical prices.

At fruit counters one will find the pink variety of grapefruit continues to dominate the picture. There still are several varieties of apples from which to choose. Bananas are an economical choice on many markets this week. Pineapples and Michigan hothouse rhubarb are now on the market. They will be more plentiful in weeks to come.

Florida valencias are a month late in hitting the market; however, prices remain at high levels and are expected to continue so.

Most grocers continue to offer a wide selection of seafoods for the Lenten menu. Lowest prices will be found on ocean perch, cod, haddock, fish sticks and halibut.

Look for loin and rib section of beef to be featured this week. At the dairy counters there's a wide variety of natural and processed cheeses.

Dad Asks Return Of Drugged Girls

CLEVELAND (AP) — Juvenile Court Judge Albert A. Woldman will hear a new motion Thursday over custody of the two Fratantonio "sleeping beauty" girls.

The girls, Bernadette, 3, and Venita, 6, have been at the Parmadale Children's Home since last August, under court order. Their mother, Mrs. Lillian Fratantonio, was convicted Dec. 6 of secretly feeding her daughters drugs which sent them into long periods of sleep that baffled doctors for many months.

Mrs. Fratantonio was fined $500 and ordered to serve a one-year jail sentence. She has been free on $2,500 bond pending outcome of an appeal.

The new motion by attorneys is for the children to be released to the custody of the father, Vincent.

Death Claims Rep. Reece, Ex-GOP Head

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. B. Carroll Reece of Tennessee, one-time Republican national chairman and long allied with the most conservative forces of his party, is dead at 71.

Reece died Sunday in the Bethesda, Md., Navy Medical Center, which he entered in January. The hospital reported death was caused by lung cancer.

His death left the house lineup at 172 Republicans and 260 Democrats, with five vacancies.

Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon said at Los Angeles he felt a personal loss because Reece "was one of my most loyal friends and supporters." Nixon said "in his long career he established a record of success in political activity which has seldom been equaled in the nation's history."

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower, vacationing at Palm Springs, Calif., called Reece "a veteran in legislative and political affairs and a staunch supporter of the principles I have sought to advance during the years of my two administrations. He will be greatly missed."

Reece served as national chairman from 1946 to 1949, resigning his House seat to do so. Under his direction the GOP captured control of Congress in 1946 — the Congress President Harry S. Truman assailed as a "do-nothing Congress" in his successful 1948 presidential campaign.

Reece was serving his 18th term in the House. He suffered only one defeat, in 1930, and after that was not even opposed by Democratic candidates in his staunchly Republican district, one of two GOP districts in Tennessee.

Reece was born at Butler, Tenn., one of 13 children.

Ann Landers

ANSWERS YOUR PROBLEMS

Dear Ann Landers: A close friend confided that she no longer could stand by silently and watch my husband play me for a fool. It seems that everyone except I knew he has been having an affair with his secretary for the last six years.

I pulled myself together and decided to go see her husband. He was the sweetest and most understanding man I had ever met. He said he has known about the affair from the beginning but for the sake of his three children and our two, he kept quiet.

We decided to meet again to talk, and well — we've been meeting three times a week for the last two months.

You've probably guessed by now that we've fallen in love. He wants to marry me and I want to marry him. But the trouble is that since my husband knows I look good to someone else he is now begging for another chance.

His secretary has quit her job and wants to devote her life to making her husband happy. This is some mess, Ann. Where do I go from here? — OTHER FOOT.

Dear Foot: Go back to your husband where you belong. His shoddy behavior in no way justifies yours. It sounds as if there is plenty to forgive and forget on both sides. The five children involved in this switchman's holiday deserve some consideration. See that they get it.

Ashamed Of Relatives

Dear Ann: My husband comes from a poor family. He is the youngest and the only one who went to college. We are doing well financially and just built a beautiful home in a high-class suburb.

My husband's two brothers live in a small town about 50 miles away. They come to visit often. They are nice enough but their clothes are shabby and they don't look clean. One brother works in a gasoline station and when I look at his grimy hands I want to die.

I'm afraid one day when they are visiting, some friends or neighbors may drop in. I wouldn't mind if they were presentable but some days they look like hobos who came by for a handout.

Please don't say I'm a snob and ought to be ashamed of myself. I'm writing for advice because I want to know how to handle this embarrassing situation. —HEADACHE.

Dear Headache: Never apologize for sour relatives. Introduce them to whoever drops in and relax with the knowledge that the condition of their clothes or hands reflects in no way on you.

If you behave in a way that suggests you are ashamed of them you only hurt yourself.

Gifts On Approval

Dear Ann: The fellow I'm engaged to is wonderful but his mother drives me crazy.

For Christmas I spent $22 on her gift. I shopped one entire lunch hour for a necklace and earring set I thought she'd like.

On Jan. 19 she told me she didn't care for the jewelry and asked if I would return them and get her some bedsheets. I agreed, although I was very hurt.

Last week she phoned me again to say the bedsheets were nice and she had used two but would I exchange the others for bath towels? What would you do? — SHORT FUSE.

Dear Fuse: Tell her she may exchange the bedsheets for bath towels if she wishes but you cannot spare the time. In the future give her gift certificates and let HER drive the salespeople batty.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of The Review, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

You can add chopped dried fruit instead of nuts to fudge.

The mishap was one of four investigated over the weekend by the Lisbon State Highway Patrol.

Mrs. Cornelia Huyghe, 36, of 1819 Main St., Wellsville, and two passengers in her auto were injured in the mishap at 5:45 p. m., the patrol said.

The mishap occurred when an auto operated by Mary Moore, 37, of 900 Commerce St. crashed into the rear of Mrs. Huyghe's car, which was halted for a turn. Both autos were headed south.

Mrs. Huyghe suffered chest and neck injuries. Her passengers, Hazel Connor, 62, of 943 Center St., and Cherrie Fitzgerald, 21, of 955 Riverside Ave., received neck injuries. All were treated at City Hospital.

The patrol said the Moore woman was cited on a charge of failing to halt in the assured clear distance.

In another mishap Saturday, Charles Cain, 17, of Beloit R. D. 2 was driving east on Route 62 five miles west of Salem when his car was struck in the rear by the auto of Rodney Murdock, 43, also of Salem. Murdock was cited on a charge of failing to halt in the assured clear distance.

George Ransom, 63, of Columbiana was cited on a charge of driving left of center when his auto went off the road and into the yard of R. E. Simon of Columbiana R. D. 2 Sunday at 2 a. m. The auto damaged some shrubs and bushes. The mishap occurred on Route 46, four miles southeast of Columbiana.

Donald Porter of Beulah, Colo., suffered a broken left cheekbone and bruises when the car in which he was a passenger crashed into a ditch at 8:10 a. m. Sunday on Route 30, a half mile west of Lisbon.

The driver was Barbara Dyche of Cleveland. She was cited on a charge of reckless operation, the patrol said.

Seaway Tolls Miss Quotas

OTTAWA (AP)—Traffic on the St. Lawrence Seaway has been substantially under predictions, and the result may be an outcry from critics in the United States to raise all tolls on the waterway.

Canadian and American seaway officials are scheduled to review the tolls in 1964. But revenue figures for the 1960 seaway operation, announced Sunday, showed that tonnage through the waterway was well below expectations for the seaway's second year of operation.

The seaway earned $10,109,059 on 20,310,346 tons of cargo handled in the international canals between Montreal and Lake Ontario in 1960. The prediction called for $15,196,000 in revenue on 29 million tons.

In 1959, first year of seaway operation, tolls produced $10,046,877 on 20,593,142 tons of cargo.

For 1961, the forecast calls for 33 million tons of cargo and revenue of $17,292,000. Shipping experts regard the forecasts as unrealistic.

By law, seaway agencies of Canada and the United States must charge tolls at a level high enough to pay operation and maintenance costs and amortize the construction cost of the project over the seaway's first 50 years. This would require an average annual earning of $25,076,215 provided operation costs don't go up.

Shipping experts recommended extension of the amortization period, perhaps for 30 years more, rather than a toll increase.

Broken Horn Valves Hamper Wellsville's Band At Contest

The Wellsville High School ran into some bad luck during the district music contest Saturday at Carrollton High School — the French horn valves broke during the competition.

The band received a "very good" rating. Theodore Koenig, director, said the horn broke during a solo, leaving a large "gap" in the selection.

Wellsville was in Class B-1 for high schools with enrollments of 500 to 700 and was competing against bands from Lisbon, Dover, Minerva, Jefferson Union and Fairless.

The David Anderson High School Band from Lisbon received an "excellent rating."

The Wellsville High School Chorus, directed by Miss Phyllis Zimmerman, received an "excellent" rating.

Stanton Local High's Band received a final rating of 2, which is the equivalent of "excellent," Don Paul, director of the 64-member group, said.

The Irondale band had been rated "superior" the past four years. Only bands receiving the top rating are eligible to participate in the state contest.

Stanton's band competed in Class B-2,, up two classes from last year when it competed in Class C-2. This year the band competed against schools with enrollments of up to 350.

Only six of the 24 bands competing received superior ratings, Paul reported. They were Malvern, Dover, Fairless, Carrollton, East Canton and Northwest.

"Unless you finally accept responsibility for your own behaviour and your own future development and acquire a sense of self-discipline and self - responsibility you may never really grow up," Maus said.

"With all this modern talk about togetherness and about that thing some people call group dynamics, don't let anyone talk you out of getting for yourself an abiding sense of self-responsibility," the speaker continued.

Without it, Maus said, a person never can be a successful employer and not much more than a mediocre employe. Self - responsibility is the only soil in which initiative can flourish, he pointed out.

"There is no automatic economic security for anyone short of the grave. Mother Nature invites the exploitation of her resources, but she does not deliver any breakfast in bed! You cannot consider yourself grown up until you finally decide to earn your own way through life.

"A man or woman who hopes to get along in this world by getting something for nothing still has on his or her hands the problem of growing up," he declared.

3 Women Hurt In Super Road Auto Collision

Three Wellsville women were injured slightly in a two-car auto crash late Saturday afternoon on the "super-road" a mile and a half south of East Liverpool.

The mishap was one of four investigated over the weekend by the Lisbon State Highway Patrol.

Mrs. Cornelia Huyghe, 36, of 1819 Main St., Wellsville, and two passengers in her auto were injured in the mishap at 5:45 p. m., the patrol said.

The mishap occurred when an auto operated by Mary Moore, 37, of 900 Commerce St. crashed into the rear of Mrs. Huyghe's car, which was halted for a turn. Both autos were headed south.

Mrs. Huyghe suffered chest and neck injuries. Her passengers, Hazel Connor, 62, of 943 Center St., and Cherrie Fitzgerald, 21, of 955 Riverside Ave., received neck injuries. All were treated at City Hospital.

The patrol said the Moore woman was cited on a charge of failing to halt in the assured clear distance.

In another mishap Saturday, Charles Cain, 17, of Beloit R. D. 2 was driving east on Route 62 five miles west of Salem when his car was struck in the rear by the auto of Rodney Murdock, 43, also of Salem. Murdock was cited on a charge of failing to halt in the assured clear distance.

Donald Porter of Beulah, Colo., suffered a broken left cheekbone and bruises when the car in which he was a passenger crashed into a ditch at 8:10 a. m. Sunday on Route 30, a half mile west of Lisbon.

The driver was Barbara Dyche of Cleveland. She was cited on a charge of reckless operation, the patrol said.

All-Ohio Battle May Unfold In NCAA Championship Game

OSU, Cincinnati Favored In Semi's

Buckeyes Face St. Joseph's; Cincy Will Battle Utah

By DON WEISS
Associated Press Sports Writer

The National Invitation Tournament, as unpredictable as ever, swings back into the basketball spotlight Tuesday night while Ohio State, still sighing with obvious relief, preps for a weekend showdown in defense of its National Collegiate (NCAA) championships.

Dayton plays Temple and Niagara meets flashy Providence in a doubleheader at New York's Madison Square Garden that will decide which pair joins St. Louis and Holy Cross in Thursday's NIT semifinals. Dayton (19-7) and Niagara (16-4) are the last of the original field of 12 teams in action in the 24th New York tournament and each has a score to settle after the way the other two seeded clubs—Colorado State and Memphis State—were treated in their openers.

Memphis State, considered a strong championship threat, was bounced by streaking Holy Cross 81-69, and St. Louis spilled Colorado State 59-53.

The six NIT survivors and Ohio State, Cincinnati, St. Joseph's (Pa.) and Utah—the four regional champions in the NCAA scrambling—are all that's left as another collegiate season, clouded for the second time in a decade by an ominous fix scandal, moves toward its climax next Saturday.

The NIT plays its final on Saturday afternoon with the NCAA championship Saturday night in Kansas City, where unbeaten Ohio State plays St. Joseph's and Cincinnati meets Utah in semifinal tests Friday night.

The two small college tournaments ended last Saturday, with Wittenberg (Ohio) beating Southeast Missouri 42-38 for the NCAA title, and Grambling (La.) whipping Georgetown (Ky.) 93-75 in the NAIA final.

Ohio State extended its two-season winning streak to 31 and its 1960-61 record to 26-0 over the weekend, thumping Kentucky 87-74 in the Mideast regional final at Louisville Saturday night after escaping with a 56-55 victory over the University of Louisville 24 hours before. All-America Jerry Lucas, held to a career low of nine points by Louisville, stormed back with 33 points and 30 rebounds in the Kentucky romp.

In St. Joseph's, the Buckeyes meet a club on a 15-game streak after spilling Princeton 72-67 and then Wake Forest 96-86 in the Eastern regional at Charlotte.

An Ohio State victory likely would set up a meeting of the nation's No. 1 and No. 2 teams, since second-ranked Cincinnati will be favored over Utah's Skyline Conference kings in the other semifinal.

Cincinnati pushed its winning streak to 20 and its over-all record to 25-3 by beating Texas Tech 78-55 and Kansas State 69-64 in the Midwest regional at Lawrence Kan.

Utah, which won the Skyline NCAA berth in a playoff with Colorado State, got 60 points from 6-9 Billy McGill in nailing the Far West regional crown at Portland, Ore., with a 91-75 triumph over Loyola of Los Angeles and an 88-80 decision over Arizona State.

Providence, with Johnny Egan scoring 34 points, downed DePaul 73-67 and Temple built a 24-point halftime lead and coasted past out-classed Army 79-66 in an afternoon doubleheader in the NIT that preceded the quarter - final triumphs by Holy Cross and St. Louis.

Mossi, Narleski Return To Old Form With Tigers

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

Injury-plagued Don Mossi and Ray Narleski are reforming the combination that made them the relief pitching duo in the majors.

The former bullpen specialists who made 82 appearances between them for pennant-winning Cleveland in 1954, then continued to toil spectacularly until traded to Detroit in 1958, picked up victories Sunday as the Tigers won a pair of exhibitions.

Mossi, who compiled a 9-8 record with a 3.47 earned run average although slowed by a sore arm in the 1960 campaign, hurled effectively for five innings and combined with Paul Foytack to six-hit Washington 14-1.

Narleski, sidelined for the entire season last year with a ruptured disc in his back, allowed three runs in his first inning before settling down for two stanzas of scoreless relief as the other half of the Tigers' squad edged Philadelphia 10-8.

In other games, St. Louis whipped Pittsburgh 8-0, Kansas City blanked the Chicago White Sox 2-0, Cincinnati outlasted Milwaukee 13-10, Minnesota Twins bombed Los Angeles' Dodgers 10-2 Cleveland beat San Francisco 15-9 Baltimore edged New York 7-6 and Chicago's Cubs split, defeating the Los Angeles Angels 10-8 while losing to Boston 6-3.

Charley Maxwell hit two homers and a double in Detroit's 16-hit outburst against the Senators while home runs by Larry Osborne and pinch hitter Bubba Morton in an 18-hit attack gave them their victory over the Phils. Tony Curry drove in five Philadelphia runs with three doubles.

The Cards won it early, lacing Pittsburgh starter Harvey Haddix for five first-inning runs on singles by Julian Javier, Bill White, Ken Boyer, and Stan Musial, a double by Daryl Spencer and two passed balls. Bob Gibson, Ron Kline and Lindy McDaniel blanked the world champions on seven hits—four by Bill Mazeroski.

Rookie Norm Bass started the string of shutout frames against the White Sox, pitching three-hit ball over five innings before Dick Wickersham and Dick Hall finished up. Andy Carey drove in one Kansas City run with a single. Frank Cipriani accounted for the other with a sacrifice fly.

More Witnesses Scheduled Today In Cage Scandal

By ED CORRIGAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Another parade of witnesses in the current college basketball scandal was scheduled to go before the district attorney's investigators today as the probe continued to widen.

"We will be questioning several players and others from various colleges under investigation," said a spokesman for the district attorney's office.

So far two Seton Hall players and one from the University of Connecticut have been accused of accepting bribes to hold down the point totals of two specific games.

The district attorney said Henry Gunter and Arthur Hicks, both 21, of Seton Hall, were paid $1,000 each for shaving their team's points in a game against Dayton in Madison Square Garden on Feb. 9.

The University of Connecticut player, so far unidentified, was paid $1,500 to hold down the score of his team in a game against Colgate, in Hamilton, N.Y., on March 1, the district attorney said.

Two accused fixers have been arrested. They are Aaron Wagman, 28, of New York, and Joseph Hacken, 41, also of New York. Both have previous gambling convictions.

Two assistant district attorneys —Alfred J. Scotti, head of the rackets bureau, and Peter Andreoli—head the investigation and apparently they want to give protection to the players questioned. They refused even to say where they would quiz today's witnesses.

This seems to be the wish of District Attorney Frank Hogan, who also handled the investigation in the 1951 scandal that involved 33 players from some of the top teams in the country.

Hogan, insiders say, felt he could have gotten more convictions in the 1951 case if there hadn't been so much publicity given to the players.

Adams Is Chosen Most Valuable At Ohio University

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — Bunk Adams, 6-foot-2 senior from Toledo, has been named most valuable player on the Ohio University basketball team as he relinquishes his captaincy of the Mid-American Conference champions to three juniors.

Named tri-captains for next season at the squad's annual banquet Sunday night were Loren Wilcox of West LaFayette, Dave Katz of Cleveland and Bill Whaley of Adams.

Pairings Are Set For Weekend Tilts

Portsmouth To Meet Elyria; Urbana Vs. East Tech

By FRITZ HOWELL
Associated Press Sports Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Eight survivors of Ohio's 954 high school basketball teams battle for the state championships this weekend —and there isn't a standout favorite in the bunch.

The tournament, scheduled Friday and Saturday at Ohio State's St. John Arena, appears the most wide-open scrap for the titles in years.

Three of the eight, two in Class A and one in Class AA, are unbeaten, but any team capable of getting this far is capable of beating anyone—and only one in each class can emerge with the championship.

In pairings made Sunday for the colorful classic, the best-record teams in each division drew each other for the opening frays, and those with the poorer marks were matched.

Here's how they line up Friday:

Class A

1:30 p.m., Ayersville (28-0) vs. Proctorville Fairland (25-0); 3:15 p.m., Youngstown Liberty (26-1) vs. Madison South (23-2).

Class AA

7:30 p.m., Urbana (24-0) vs. Cleveland East Tech (21-2); 9:15 p.m., Portsmouth (20-3) vs. Elyria (20-4).

The Class A survivors meet at 2 p.m. Saturday for the championship won a year ago by Salem Local, and the Class AA victors clash at 8 p.m. for the title won a year ago by Dayton Roosevelt.

In 1958 the all-time high in team caliber was set as seven of the eight reached the state meet with clean records. The AA quartet had a 96-0 record, and Class A 100-3.

In 1959 the big schools were 88-9, the smaller contingent 98-9, and last year the Class AA group was 93-3 and Class A 101-3.

This time the big schools are 85-10, with Cinderella team Elyria having suffered half the losses. Class A is 102-3.

Cleveland East Tech, the winner in 1958 and 1959, and runnerup last year, is in the Class AA tourney for the fourth straight year. Portsmouth was the 1931 victor, but Elyria and Urbana are in for the first time.

Ayersville, 1957 champion, is the only one of the Class A quartet ever to appear in the big show—and the Defiance club is as close to a favorite as a team could be.

It was rated No. 1 in the final Associated Press poll, Youngstown Liberty tenth, Proctorville, Fairland 27th and Madison South tied for 43rd.

In the Class AA final poll East Tech was second, Urbana sixth, Portsmouth eighth, and Elyria 36th.

Under the tournament setup Urbana, Portsmouth, Ayersville and Youngstown Liberty were designated "home" teams for the openers and will wear white uniforms. The eight coaches picked up 1,250 tickets each for Friday's games, and the winners will get 1,600 for Saturday's "A" game and 2,100 for the Double-A finals.

All the coaches ordered a set of game movies of their contests, at a cost of $50 per game, with the Ohio High School Athletic Association picking up the additional tab of $100 per contest.

The mentors were informed by Commissioner W. J. McConnell that:

No practice sessions will be allowed, except a pregame 30-minute workout; no parades with banners or placards will be permitted: confetti may not b ethrown; officials' decisions will be final; rectangular glass backboards will be used; and all players must pass a physical examination before the tournament starts.

Grace U.P. Captures 1961 YMCA-Church League Crown

Grace United Presbyterian captured the 1961 YMCA - Church League championship by nipping Boyce Methodist in a thriller, 18-17 Saturday night on the "Y" court.

Snowden with eight points and Horger's six markers paced the new league champs in the title game. Evans had eight points for the runnerup Boyce team.

Grace gained the finals with a 19-13 win over St. Stephen's with Horger leading the way in this game with nine points. Massey also pitched in nine for St. Stephen's.

Boyce Methodist edged First Methodist 17-15 in the semi-finals with Null leading the attack with six. Agnew dropped in seven for First Methodist.

Trophies were presented to Grace United and Boyce Methodist players.

The annual Church League tournament with all 18 teams competing will open next Saturday.

Mountie Player Saves Woman In Ohio River

WHEELING, W. Va. (AP)—Lee Patrone of Bellaire, Ohio, co-captain of the West Virginia University basketball team, pulled a 40-year-old divorcee from the Ohio River Sunday after she had jumped 90 feet from a bridge.

The woman, Mrs. Wilma Oddis of Bellaire, was reported in critical condition at a Wheeling hospital with head and internal injuries. Police were unable to question her immediately to learn why she jumped.

Patrone and several friends were driving across the bridge between McMechen and Bellaire when they noticed several people looking toward the water. Mrs. Oddis was floating in the river. Patrone yelled to her and, failing to get a response, leaped into the water and pulled her 40 yards to shore.

All-Ohio Battle May Unfold In NCAA Championship Game

Buckeyes Face St. Joseph's; Cincy Will Battle Utah

By DON WEISS
Associated Press Sports Writer

The National Invitation Tournament, as unpredictable as ever, swings back into the basketball spotlight Tuesday night while Ohio State, still sighing with obvious relief, preps for a weekend showdown in defense of its National Collegiate (NCAA) championships.

Dayton plays Temple and Niagara meets flashy Providence in a doubleheader at New York's Madison Square Garden that will decide which pair joins St. Louis and Holy Cross in Thursday's NIT semifinals. Dayton (19-7) and Niagara (16-4) are the last of the original field of 12 teams in action in the 24th New York tournament and each has a score to settle after the way the other two seeded clubs—Colorado State and Memphis State—were treated in their openers.

Memphis State, considered a strong championship threat, was bounced by streaking Holy Cross 81-69, and St. Louis spilled Colorado State 59-53.

The six NIT survivors and Ohio State, Cincinnati, St. Joseph's (Pa.) and Utah—the four regional champions in the NCAA scrambling—are all that's left as another collegiate season, clouded for the second time in a decade by an ominous fix scandal, moves toward its climax next Saturday.

The NIT plays its final on Saturday afternoon with the NCAA championship Saturday night in Kansas City, where unbeaten Ohio State plays St. Joseph's and Cincinnati meets Utah in semifinal tests Friday night.

The two small college tournaments ended last Saturday, with Wittenberg (Ohio) beating Southeast Missouri 42-38 for the NCAA title, and Grambling (La.) whipping Georgetown (Ky.) 93-75 in the NAIA final.

Ohio State extended its two-season winning streak to 31 and its 1960-61 record to 26-0 over the weekend, thumping Kentucky 87-74 in the Mideast regional final at Louisville Saturday night after escaping with a 56-55 victory over the University of Louisville 24 hours before. All-America Jerry Lucas, held to a career low of nine points by Louisville, stormed back with 33 points and 30 rebounds in the Kentucky romp.

In St. Joseph's, the Buckeyes meet a club on a 15-game streak after spilling Princeton 72-67 and then Wake Forest 96-86 in the Eastern regional at Charlotte.

An Ohio State victory likely would set up a meeting of the nation's No. 1 and No. 2 teams, since second-ranked Cincinnati will be favored over Utah's Skyline Conference kings in the other semifinal.

Cincinnati pushed its winning streak to 20 and its over-all record to 25-3 by beating Texas Tech 78-55 and Kansas State 69-64 in the Midwest regional at Lawrence Kan.

Utah, which won the Skyline NCAA berth in a playoff with Colorado State, got 60 points from 6-9 Billy McGill in nailing the Far West regional crown at Portland, Ore., with a 91-75 triumph over Loyola of Los Angeles and an 88-80 decision over Arizona State.

Providence, with Johnny Egan scoring 34 points, downed DePaul 73-67 and Temple built a 24-point halftime lead and coasted past out-classed Army 79-66 in an afternoon doubleheader in the NIT that preceded the quarter - final triumphs by Holy Cross and St. Louis.

Class AA

7:30 p.m., Urbana (24-0) vs. Cleveland East Tech (21-2); 9:15 p.m., Portsmouth (20-3) vs. Elyria (20-4).

The Class A survivors meet at 2 p.m. Saturday for the championship won a year ago by Salem Local, and the Class AA victors clash at 8 p.m. for the title won a year ago by Dayton Roosevelt.

In 1958 the all-time high in team caliber was set as seven of the eight reached the state meet with clean records. The AA quartet had a 96-0 record, and Class A 100-3.

In 1959 the big schools were 88-9, the smaller contingent 98-9, and last year the Class AA group was 93-3 and Class A 101-3.

This time the big schools are 85-10, with Cinderella team Elyria having suffered half the losses. Class A is 102-3.

Cleveland East Tech, the winner in 1958 and 1959, and runnerup last year, is in the Class AA tourney for the fourth straight year. Portsmouth was the 1931 victor, but Elyria and Urbana are in for the first time.

Ayersville, 1957 champion, is the only one of the Class A quartet ever to appear in the big show—and the Defiance club is as close to a favorite as a team could be.

It was rated No. 1 in the final Associated Press poll, Youngstown Liberty tenth, Proctorville, Fairland 27th and Madison South tied for 43rd.

In the Class AA final poll East Tech was second, Urbana sixth, Portsmouth eighth, and Elyria 36th.

Under the tournament setup Urbana, Portsmouth, Ayersville and Youngstown Liberty were designated "home" teams for the openers and will wear white uniforms. The eight coaches picked up 1,250 tickets each for Friday's games, and the winners will get 1,600 for Saturday's "A" game and 2,100 for the Double-A finals.

All the coaches ordered a set of game movies of their contests, at a cost of $50 per game, with the Ohio High School Athletic Association picking up the additional tab of $100 per contest.

The mentors were informed by Commissioner W. J. McConnell that:

No practice sessions will be allowed, except a pregame 30-minute workout; no parades with banners or placards will be permitted: confetti may not b ethrown; officials' decisions will be final; rectangular glass backboards will be used; and all players must pass a physical examination before the tournament starts.

Mountie Player Saves Woman In Ohio River

WHEELING, W. Va. (AP)—Lee Patrone of Bellaire, Ohio, co-captain of the West Virginia University basketball team, pulled a 40-year-old divorcee from the Ohio River Sunday after she had jumped 90 feet from a bridge.

The woman, Mrs. Wilma Oddis of Bellaire, was reported in critical condition at a Wheeling hospital with head and internal injuries. Police were unable to question her immediately to learn why she jumped.

Patrone and several friends were driving across the bridge between McMechen and Bellaire when they noticed several people looking toward the water. Mrs. Oddis was floating in the river. Patrone yelled to her and, failing to get a response, leaped into the water and pulled her 40 yards to shore.

Attorney To Be Hired

Midland Tax Opponents Schedule Drive For Funds

The Tri-State Citizens' Committee protesting Midland's $10 - a-year occupation tax has announced a drive for funds to finance the fight.

Atty. Clifton Hood of Beaver Falls has been retained by the committee to start action this week to seek an injunction against collection of the tax, to be effective June 1 on all who are employed in Midland.

A public mass meeting has been set by the committee for Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the fire hall at Ohio View in Industry.

The committee, composed of non-residents employed at Crucible, reported that response of employes paid Friday was gratifying and "disapproved the contention that a bunch of hot heads are at the bottom of this." The committee said that many times more than the amount given then will be realized on Tuesday when production and maintenance workers are paid.

"Contributions are welcomed from all people interested in a fight against taxation without representation," it said. The Ft. McIntosh Bank in Beaver has been named depository for all contributions and the committee has issued an appeal for funds to all interested persons, whether employed in Midland or not.

Contributions may be sent to the bank in the committee's name or given to a member of citizens committee or its officers, who are John Guernsey of Brighton Township, chairman, John Flasco of Ohio Township, vice chairman, Mike Feraci of Brighton Township, treasurer, James Britton of West Mayfield, secretary, or Louise Snyder of Vanport and Elizabeth Katocs of Industry, publicity co-chairmen.

Midland Council adopted the tax at its Feb. 23 meeting contending that all who work in the borough should share in the cost of services provided. It pointed out that the services provided are necessary for the large number of non-residents who come into the borough to work.

More than 100 non-resident employes of Crucible attended a mass meeting March 6 in the fire hall in Ohio View, Industry, and formed a 23-member committee to hire a lawyer and, if possible, test the tax in court.

The committee emphasized today "that it isn't the $10 being imposed in an election year in the borough but the aspect of reducing the millage and property tax for residents of Midland just before the primary election and adding that part of the tax burden and more to outsiders."

"The implied threat of the statement being circulated through the lower Ohio Valley and attributed to the 'political machine' in Midland that 'It is better to pay $10 rather than $50' has not detered the committee's determination to bring this matter to light and to see a ruling on the issue," it added.

"Many comments have been heard on the street and have been made in public print with regard to the protestors. Even a professional man has publicly advised them to quit their jobs if they do not like the tax.

"Implications have been made that the major industry in Midland, the Crucible Steel Co. of America, approves the operation of the present powers that be or would have come out against them.

"The committee feels that Crucible has done far too much for Midland to be involved in such an operation. They (Crucible) have handed to Midland an excellent water system. They have given land to Midland on which to erect a sewage disposal system. And they have paid in the treasury of the borough many thousands of dollars to help them over a rough spot since the machinery tax law was repealed."

Chester Crash Smashes Auto

The 1950 sedan of George Chapman of Phoenix Ave., Chester, was demolished at 5:45 a. m. today when it hit the rear of a tractor parked on Carolina Ave. between 6th and 7th Sts. in Chester.

Police Chief Harold Davis said Chapman will be charged with failure to have his vehicle under control. The car overturned after hitting the tractor, which is a part of a tractor - trailer. The tractor, which received slight damage, is owned by Darry Freight Service of Mason City, Iowa.

Chapman told Davis there was frost on his windshield. Davis reported the car a total loss and said Chapman complained of chest pains, but was not hospitalized.

George Cowey, a Chester volunteer, took a fire truck to the scene to flush away gasoline.

Lisbon, City Motorists Fined In Traffic Cases

James W. Brown, 1042 Huston Ave., cited March 3 on Route 30 by the patrol for passing on an approach to a curve, was fined $10 and costs.

Max W. Goppert of Glenmoor was to appear at 1 p. m. on a reckless driving charge after being cited by the patrol Friday on St. Clair Ave. Ext. The patrol said Goppert pulled from Casting Club Rd., turned north and went left of center into the path of an approaching southbound auto.

George L. Carnes of Grimms Bridge was due for a hearing at 3 p. m. for operating a car without a muffler. He was cited Friday on Route 30 by the patrol.

Attorney To Be Hired

Midland Tax Opponents Schedule Drive For Funds

The Tri-State Citizens' Committee protesting Midland's $10 - a-year occupation tax has announced a drive for funds to finance the fight.

Atty. Clifton Hood of Beaver Falls has been retained by the committee to start action this week to seek an injunction against collection of the tax, to be effective June 1 on all who are employed in Midland.

A public mass meeting has been set by the committee for Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the fire hall at Ohio View in Industry.

The committee, composed of non-residents employed at Crucible, reported that response of employes paid Friday was gratifying and "disapproved the contention that a bunch of hot heads are at the bottom of this." The committee said that many times more than the amount given then will be realized on Tuesday when production and maintenance workers are paid.

"Contributions are welcomed from all people interested in a fight against taxation without representation," it said. The Ft. McIntosh Bank in Beaver has been named depository for all contributions and the committee has issued an appeal for funds to all interested persons, whether employed in Midland or not.

Contributions may be sent to the bank in the committee's name or given to a member of citizens committee or its officers, who are John Guernsey of Brighton Township, chairman, John Flasco of Ohio Township, vice chairman, Mike Feraci of Brighton Township, treasurer, James Britton of West Mayfield, secretary, or Louise Snyder of Vanport and Elizabeth Katocs of Industry, publicity co-chairmen.

Midland Council adopted the tax at its Feb. 23 meeting contending that all who work in the borough should share in the cost of services provided. It pointed out that the services provided are necessary for the large number of non-residents who come into the borough to work.

More than 100 non-resident employes of Crucible attended a mass meeting March 6 in the fire hall in Ohio View, Industry, and formed a 23-member committee to hire a lawyer and, if possible, test the tax in court.

The committee emphasized today "that it isn't the $10 being imposed in an election year in the borough but the aspect of reducing the millage and property tax for residents of Midland just before the primary election and adding that part of the tax burden and more to outsiders."

"The implied threat of the statement being circulated through the lower Ohio Valley and attributed to the 'political machine' in Midland that 'It is better to pay $10 rather than $50' has not detered the committee's determination to bring this matter to light and to see a ruling on the issue," it added.

"Many comments have been heard on the street and have been made in public print with regard to the protestors. Even a professional man has publicly advised them to quit their jobs if they do not like the tax.

"Implications have been made that the major industry in Midland, the Crucible Steel Co. of America, approves the operation of the present powers that be or would have come out against them.

"The committee feels that Crucible has done far too much for Midland to be involved in such an operation. They (Crucible) have handed to Midland an excellent water system. They have given land to Midland on which to erect a sewage disposal system. And they have paid in the treasury of the borough many thousands of dollars to help them over a rough spot since the machinery tax law was repealed."

Chester Crash Smashes Auto

The 1950 sedan of George Chapman of Phoenix Ave., Chester, was demolished at 5:45 a. m. today when it hit the rear of a tractor parked on Carolina Ave. between 6th and 7th Sts. in Chester.

Police Chief Harold Davis said Chapman will be charged with failure to have his vehicle under control. The car overturned after hitting the tractor, which is a part of a tractor - trailer. The tractor, which received slight damage, is owned by Darry Freight Service of Mason City, Iowa.

Chapman told Davis there was frost on his windshield. Davis reported the car a total loss and said Chapman complained of chest pains, but was not hospitalized.

George Cowey, a Chester volunteer, took a fire truck to the scene to flush away gasoline.

Lisbon, City Motorists Fined In Traffic Cases

Two motorists were fined today in Municipal Court for traffic violations and two others cited by the State Highway Patrol were to appear this afternoon.

Robert Cannon, 18, of 407 W. Washington St., Lisbon, was fined $15 and costs on a charge of speeding 60 miles an hour Sunday night on W. 8th St.

James W. Brown, 1042 Huston Ave., cited March 3 on Route 30 by the patrol for passing on an approach to a curve, was fined $10 and costs.

Max W. Goppert of Glenmoor was to appear at 1 p. m. on a reckless driving charge after being cited by the patrol Friday on St. Clair Ave. Ext. The patrol said Goppert pulled from Casting Club Rd., turned north and went left of center into the path of an approaching southbound auto.

George L. Carnes of Grimms Bridge was due for a hearing at 3 p. m. for operating a car without a muffler. He was cited Friday on Route 30 by the patrol.

Fast Freeze May Be Surgical Lead To 'Transplants'

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) —A Minnesota scientist today reported development of a technique he said might open the way towards the goal of transplanting entire organs from one person to another.

Dr. Claude R. Hitchcock of Minneapolis General Hospital said he and fellow researchers had successfully removed a kidney or lung from baboons and dogs, kept them alive outside the body for periods up to 24 hours, then replanted them in the same animals and found that normal function quickly resulted.

He told a seminar of science writers sponsored by the American Cancer Society that the technique—featuring quick cooling of the organs to an ice-cold state and freeing them entirely of blood —might help science in its attempts to change the characteristics of cells within organs of an animal—and eventually of a human—so that such an organ would not be rejected when transplanted into another living subject.

Up to now such transplants can be made only between identical twins, and so far only with kidneys.

In a separate interview, he said that in "the far future," with the aid of his and allied techniques, it might be possible to take an organ, such as the liver, from the body of a person killed in an accident, alter its cellular characteristics, store it in a refrigerator, and then transplant it into the body of a person whose own organ was diseased.

How Can I?

By ANNE ASHLEY

Q. Can you suggest a way I can keep the concrete floor in my cellar from getting dusty?

A. Give the concrete a coating of wax. This is usually effective. If you don't want to use wax or if it proves ineffective, a hardener can be applied. Mix your own hardner by combining one part of water glass with four parts of water. Apply this mixture in two coats, allowing the first to dry for at least 48 hours before applying the second.

Q. How can I keep baby's shoes in better condition?

A. After buying a pair of new baby shoes, give them a few coats of clear fingernail polish. They will not need polishing for a long time, and will also look new for a longer time.

Q. How can I clean and freshen black felt hats?

A. Use a teaspoonful of ammonia mixed with one-half cup of cold water.

Spring Offers Reducing Opportunity

"You are my last hope," writes a discouraged dieter whose numerous diet attempts have ended in dismal failure. All those interested in a new beginning, join us.

By Ida Jean Kain

Spring brings a resurgence of hope. Surely if ever there were a perfect time for beginning afresh, it is now when all earth is renewed.

With repeated failures, another go-round at dieting is apt to be just more of the same. You need to try a different plan — one that sparks your interest. On the theory that it helps to do something dramatic, perhaps even drastic, at the beginning of a reducing program, the dietitian suggests that you adventure in a fortified diet. Bolster the diet ... and the dieter ...at the weak spots.

Your heart's desire is not only to slim down, but to look and feel a good 10 years younger. It's spring ... you want to take measures to make life young again.

ON THE REDUCING score, besides the satisfaction of losing two pounds a week, you want to appease hunger, lessen your food capacity, and feel vigorous the while. Carry this further ... when you reach desirable weight you want to be able to eat three meals a day and live happily slim ever after.

There's a way to do exactly this. Your slim-down plan must be patterned on three meals a day, and based around the foods that build slimness. By this system, you progress in the direction of changing your food habits. Through scientific research, it has been proved that three moderate meals a day, with a protein food at each meal, provide the best energy carry-over.

Smaller meals are needed to lessen your food capacity so you will feel content on fewer calories. Now the fortifier: To bolster the staying power of you — and your meals — use the current, popular formula diet as a supplement.

The original diet formula plan, introduced 20 years ago, was designed to be used with a dietene supplement. The supplement furnishes replenishing nutrients. Try it ... you'll lose.

Fast Freeze May Be Surgical Lead To 'Transplants'

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) —A Minnesota scientist today reported development of a technique he said might open the way towards the goal of transplanting entire organs from one person to another.

Dr. Claude R. Hitchcock of Minneapolis General Hospital said he and fellow researchers had successfully removed a kidney or lung from baboons and dogs, kept them alive outside the body for periods up to 24 hours, then replanted them in the same animals and found that normal function quickly resulted.

He told a seminar of science writers sponsored by the American Cancer Society that the technique—featuring quick cooling of the organs to an ice-cold state and freeing them entirely of blood —might help science in its attempts to change the characteristics of cells within organs of an animal—and eventually of a human—so that such an organ would not be rejected when transplanted into another living subject.

Up to now such transplants can be made only between identical twins, and so far only with kidneys.

In a separate interview, he said that in "the far future," with the aid of his and allied techniques, it might be possible to take an organ, such as the liver, from the body of a person killed in an accident, alter its cellular characteristics, store it in a refrigerator, and then transplant it into the body of a person whose own organ was diseased.

How Can I?

By ANNE ASHLEY

Q. Can you suggest a way I can keep the concrete floor in my cellar from getting dusty?

A. Give the concrete a coating of wax. This is usually effective. If you don't want to use wax or if it proves ineffective, a hardener can be applied. Mix your own hardner by combining one part of water glass with four parts of water. Apply this mixture in two coats, allowing the first to dry for at least 48 hours before applying the second.

Q. How can I keep baby's shoes in better condition?

A. After buying a pair of new baby shoes, give them a few coats of clear fingernail polish. They will not need polishing for a long time, and will also look new for a longer time.

Q. How can I clean and freshen black felt hats?

A. Use a teaspoonful of ammonia mixed with one-half cup of cold water.

Spring Offers Reducing Opportunity

"You are my last hope," writes a discouraged dieter whose numerous diet attempts have ended in dismal failure. All those interested in a new beginning, join us.

By Ida Jean Kain

Spring brings a resurgence of hope. Surely if ever there were a perfect time for beginning afresh, it is now when all earth is renewed.

With repeated failures, another go-round at dieting is apt to be just more of the same. You need to try a different plan — one that sparks your interest. On the theory that it helps to do something dramatic, perhaps even drastic, at the beginning of a reducing program, the dietitian suggests that you adventure in a fortified diet. Bolster the diet ... and the dieter ...at the weak spots.

Your heart's desire is not only to slim down, but to look and feel a good 10 years younger. It's spring ... you want to take measures to make life young again.

ON THE REDUCING score, besides the satisfaction of losing two pounds a week, you want to appease hunger, lessen your food capacity, and feel vigorous the while. Carry this further ... when you reach desirable weight you want to be able to eat three meals a day and live happily slim ever after.

There's a way to do exactly this. Your slim-down plan must be patterned on three meals a day, and based around the foods that build slimness. By this system, you progress in the direction of changing your food habits. Through scientific research, it has been proved that three moderate meals a day, with a protein food at each meal, provide the best energy carry-over.

Smaller meals are needed to lessen your food capacity so you will feel content on fewer calories. Now the fortifier: To bolster the staying power of you — and your meals — use the current, popular formula diet as a supplement.

The original diet formula plan, introduced 20 years ago, was designed to be used with a dietene supplement. The supplement furnishes replenishing nutrients. Try it ... you'll lose.

It's Important To See Ahead In Home Plan

By DAVID L. BOWEN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

One of the most obvious facts of life is frequently forgotten when a family takes the plunge and buys a home.

Tomorrow is different than today.

Just as a corporation president about to spend a million dollars on plant expansion must remember the market for his product will not be the same five years in the future, a family investing in a home should keep in mind that what it will need five years from now is not identical to what it needs today.

For instance, consider a young couple just starting to raise a family. When they go looking for a house the tendency is to think of it in terms of convenience for small children. Will the baby's room be close to the parents'? How far will they have to walk to warm that 2 a. m. bottle?

These are problems a good house should help solve. But while the child is an infant for only a few short years, the house will be standing for decades.

Will it serve a family of teenagers as well as it serves a brood of pre-schoolers?

Take the matter of a playroom. When the children are of tender age, Mommy means protection and security. They seldom can be persuaded to play alone if she is out of sight. Thus for this stage in their development, an ideal situation is a family room-kitchen where children can play at one end and Mother can watch from another.

Ten years later, the specifications are almost diametrically opposite. Pals and boyfriends begin crowding Mother out of the picture. Pre-teeners clam up in the presence of adults. For youthful comradeship to bloom, there's a demand for privacy. The ideal teen-age recreation room is cleanly separated from the adult section of the house.

Okay, you say, so an ideal house has to be different things at different times. Can all the various demands be satisfied under one roof?

That question was put to Architect Rudolph A. Matern of Jamaica, N. Y., and he advanced the plans illustrated here. Because some of the demands a growing family puts on a house are irreconcilable, no perfect solution is possible. But this plan approaches the goal and may give you an idea of what to look for.

As you will note, the style is one and one-half story. This makes it possible to start out in what amounts to a ranch, since all essential services occur on the first floor. It's also an economical form, since second floor space is primarily a bonus stemming from the high pitch of the roof.

Let's follow the project metamorphosis of the design through the various stages of typical family life:

When the newlyweds buy or build this home, they finish only the first floor. This gives them two bedrooms, kitchen, dining and living rooms. Both garage and screened porch could be delayed.

When the first child arrives, Bedroom No. 2 at the rear is ready to serve as a nursery, handy both to the large master bedroom and the kitchen.

On or around the arrival date of the next newcomer, the second floor goes into use with one bedroom finished upstairs. When needed, the second upstairs bedroom in walled in, along with the second floor bath. This doubles the bedroom and bath capacity of the house, with no structural change and only small materials cost.

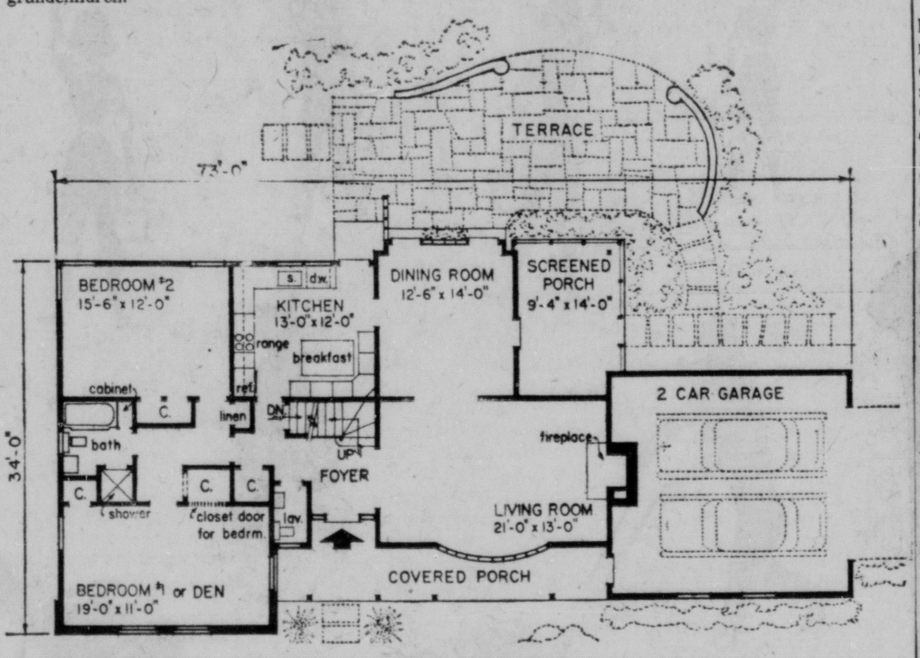
During the pre-school and grammar school years, the dining room doubles as a family room so children can play near the kitchen. As they get older, expansion attention shifts to the basement, a completely open area with full ceiling height. With a minimum of expense, this space can be compartmentalized for teen-age recreation room, hobby room, perhaps even a study hall.

Twenty years after the young couple moved in alone, the house is now being fully utilized. Of course, this completely active stage doesn't last indefinitely either. One by one the brood will marry, departing to set up homes of their own.

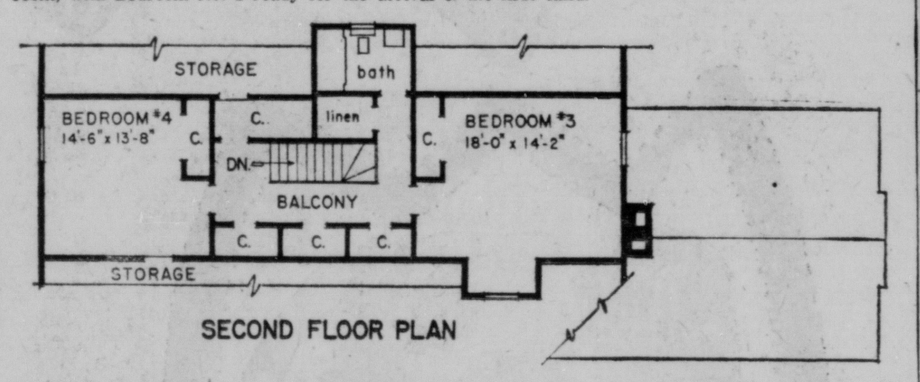
When this begins to happen, the upstairs bedrooms are simply closed down one by one.

Finally the parents have the house to themselves once more—tired by this time no doubt, but facing retirement in a home as easily adaptable to the needs of the elderly as it was to the demands of youth.

HOUSE TO GROW IN. This 1½ story home was planned as an example of a house adaptable to the many stages of typical family life, from the arrival of the owner's first child to the appearance of grandchildren.



STARTER PLAN. In the beginning, only the first floor is finished. This provides a master bedroom, with Bedroom No. 2 ready for the arrival of the first child.



FOR THE FUTURE. Two additional bedrooms and bath can be finished upstairs, bring total bedrooms to four. In the original construction, plumbing should be run to second floor and capped.

Pilgrim Number

McALESTER, Okla. (AP) — Mrs. Addie Pilgrim has auto license plates 1620, the year the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock.

Prior to World War II, Germany, Italy, and Japan were the most important nations of the "Facist International."

The average age at which John F. Kennedy's predecessors became President was 55 years.

Painting Tips Outlined For Exterior House Areas

By The Associated Press

Planning to paint the exterior of your home? Here are some tips on preparation of the various surfaces you may encounter:

New wood: Scrape and burn all pitch from knots, then scrub them with turpentine. Spot prime the knots with shellac, spar varnish or aluminum paint a day or two before painting. This is especially necessary if the wood is pine or fir.

Old wood: Paint that has cracked or checked does not necessarily have to be removed. But loose, curled, peeled or blistered paint should be removed, and a blowtorch is the easiest way — but use it with caution.

Metal: Galvanized metal that has weathered six months requires no special treatment other than cleaning, but new galvanized iron should be primed before painting. One method is a solution of eight ounces of copper sulphate to one gallon of warm water. Another is to wash the surface with mineral spirits, then apply a coat of zinc dust primer or some other standard galvanized primer.

New masonry: New masonry surfaces should be allowed to cure about six months to reduce the alkaline content — a common cause of discoloring and cracking of paint on concrete, stucco, cement, asbestos shingles, masonry blocks and bricks. To neutralize the alkalinity that still remains, apply a wash coat of two pounds of zinc sulphate crystals dissolved in a gallon of water. Brush off all deposits after it dries. Do not use this treatment when using latex paints.

Old masonry: Cracks and crevices must be patched with cement. Rake out the crumbled mortar and replace it with new mortar. Allow it to cure, or neutralize it as with new masonry before painting.

Bricks: If brick surface are in poor condition because of excessive salting — which leaves a white, powdery crust — they should be washed with a solution of three parts water and one part full strength muriatic acid.

Use the acid with caution. Add it slowly to the water, and use rubber gloves. Rinse it well and allow it to dry before painting. If the surface is mildewed, remove it with sal soda solution or a solution of one-half pound of tri-sodium phosphate to a gallon of water. Rinse it well with clear water and allow it to dry.

Here Are Rules To Follow If You Want Better Roses

Like to have a large and exquisitely beautiful rose garden?

Some thousands of home owners have rose gardens ranging from 50 to several thousand plants, including internationally - famous varieties as well as old favorites. Many more home owners of course have rose gardens ranging up to 25 plants or so.

Rose culture not only is a healthy pastime that gets people outdoors, but is one of the most mentally refreshing and beautiful activities one can engage in around the home."

"Home owners who wish to be better informed about roses should do three things," states the American Association of Nurserymen: (1) read the garden pages of their favorite newspaper and magazines, (2) join the American Rose Society, Park of Roses, Columbus, Ohio, a strictly non-profit organization with very moderate dues, and ((3) study nursery catalogues and get advice from their favorite nurserymen.

By following a few rules, the association says you help obtain better blooms, lovelier roses.

1. — When planting, dig a hole wide enough for the roots to spread out without cramping. Dig deep enough so that the soil will be loose for six inches or so below the level of the roots. Mix peat moss into the soil and firm the soil so there will be no large air spaces around the roots.

2. — Fertilize when growth starts in the spring and then again after the heavy blooming period. Do not over-fertilize. A handful of good rose fertilizer will suffice.

3. — Mulching helps roses. Spread peat moss or other mulch on the surface of the ground to a depth of two to four inches round the main stems.

4. — Spray regularly with recommended rose sprays.

5. — Snip off old blooms. This induces heavier later blooming.

6. — Where winters are severe, mound earth around the stems up to eight to ten inches high to help them through the dormant seasons.

Remove the mound in the spring.

Good care of the plants insures more bountiful production of larger blooms.

It's Important To See Ahead In Home Plan

By DAVID L. BOWEN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

One of the most obvious facts of life is frequently forgotten when a family takes the plunge and buys a home.

Tomorrow is different than today.

Just as a corporation president about to spend a million dollars on plant expansion must remember the market for his product will not be the same five years in the future, a family investing in a home should keep in mind that what it will need five years from now is not identical to what it needs today.

For instance, consider a young couple just starting to raise a family. When they go looking for a house the tendency is to think of it in terms of convenience for small children. Will the baby's room be close to the parents'? How far will they have to walk to warm that 2 a. m. bottle?

These are problems a good house should help solve. But while the child is an infant for only a few short years, the house will be standing for decades.

Will it serve a family of teenagers as well as it serves a brood of pre-schoolers?

Take the matter of a playroom. When the children are of tender age, Mommy means protection and security. They seldom can be persuaded to play alone if she is out of sight. Thus for this stage in their development, an ideal situation is a family room-kitchen where children can play at one end and Mother can watch from another.

Ten years later, the specifications are almost diametrically opposite. Pals and boyfriends begin crowding Mother out of the picture. Pre-teeners clam up in the presence of adults. For youthful comradeship to bloom, there's a demand for privacy. The ideal teen-age recreation room is cleanly separated from the adult section of the house.

Okay, you say, so an ideal house has to be different things at different times. Can all the various demands be satisfied under one roof?

That question was put to Architect Rudolph A. Matern of Jamaica, N. Y., and he advanced the plans illustrated here. Because some of the demands a growing family puts on a house are irreconcilable, no perfect solution is possible. But this plan approaches the goal and may give you an idea of what to look for.

As you will note, the style is one and one-half story. This makes it possible to start out in what amounts to a ranch, since all essential services occur on the first floor. It's also an economical form, since second floor space is primarily a bonus stemming from the high pitch of the roof.

Let's follow the project metamorphosis of the design through the various stages of typical family life:

When the newlyweds buy or build this home, they finish only the first floor. This gives them two bedrooms, kitchen, dining and living rooms. Both garage and screened porch could be delayed.

When the first child arrives, Bedroom No. 2 at the rear is ready to serve as a nursery, handy both to the large master bedroom and the kitchen.

On or around the arrival date of the next newcomer, the second floor goes into use with one bedroom finished upstairs. When needed, the second upstairs bedroom in walled in, along with the second floor bath. This doubles the bedroom and bath capacity of the house, with no structural change and only small materials cost.

During the pre-school and grammar school years, the dining room doubles as a family room so children can play near the kitchen. As they get older, expansion attention shifts to the basement, a completely open area with full ceiling height. With a minimum of expense, this space can be compartmentalized for teen-age recreation room, hobby room, perhaps even a study hall.

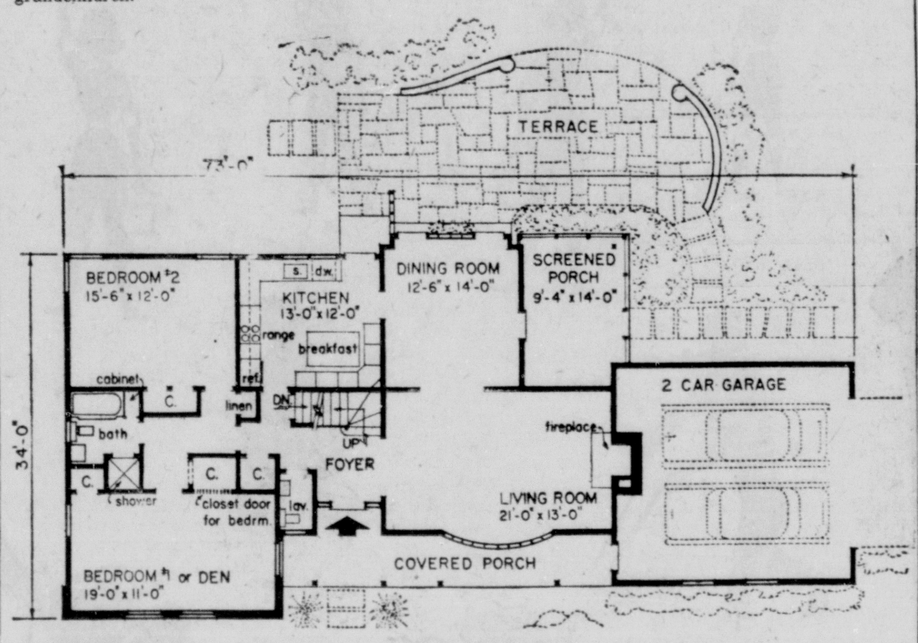
Twenty years after the young couple moved in alone, the house is now being fully utilized. Of course, this completely active stage doesn't last indefinitely either. One by one the brood will marry, departing to set up homes of their own.

When this begins to happen, the upstairs bedrooms are simply closed down one by one.

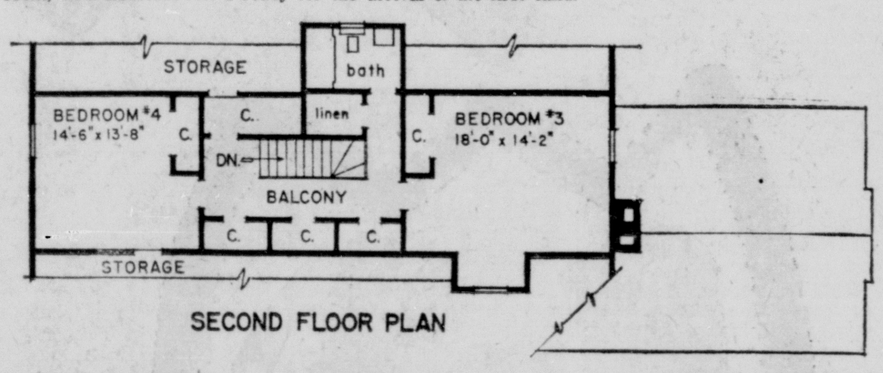
Finally the parents have the house to themselves once more—tired by this time no doubt, but facing retirement in a home as easily adaptable to the needs of the elderly as it was to the demands of youth.

The average age at which John F. Kennedy's predecessors became President was 55 years.

HOUSE TO GROW IN. This 1½ story home was planned as an example of a house adaptable to the many stages of typical family life, from the arrival of the owner's first child to the appearance of grandchildren.



STARTER PLAN. In the beginning, only the first floor is finished. This provides a master bedroom, with Bedroom No. 2 ready for the arrival of the first child.



FOR THE FUTURE. Two additional bedrooms and bath can be finished upstairs, bring total bedrooms to four. In the original construction, plumbing should be run to second floor and capped.

Painting Tips Outlined For Exterior House Areas

By The Associated Press

Planning to paint the exterior of your home? Here are some tips on preparation of the various surfaces you may encounter:

New wood: Scrape and burn all pitch from knots, then scrub them with turpentine. Spot prime the knots with shellac, spar varnish or aluminum paint a day or two before painting. This is especially necessary if the wood is pine or fir.

Old wood: Paint that has cracked or checked does not necessarily have to be removed. But loose, curled, peeled or blistered paint should be removed, and a blowtorch is the easiest way — but use it with caution.

Metal: Galvanized metal that has weathered six months requires no special treatment other than cleaning, but new galvanized iron should be primed before painting. One method is a solution of eight ounces of copper sulphate to one gallon of warm water. Another is to wash the surface with mineral spirits, then apply a coat of zinc dust primer or some other standard galvanized primer.

New masonry: New masonry surfaces should be allowed to cure about six months to reduce the alkaline content — a common cause of discoloring and cracking of paint on concrete, stucco, cement, asbestos shingles, masonry blocks and bricks. To neutralize the alkalinity that still remains, apply a wash coat of two pounds of zinc sulphate crystals dissolved in a gallon of water. Brush off all deposits after it dries. Do not use this treatment when using latex paints.

Old masonry: Cracks and crevices must be patched with cement. Rake out the crumbled mortar and replace it with new mortar. Allow it to cure, or neutralize it as with new masonry before painting.

Bricks: If brick surface are in poor condition because of excessive salting — which leaves a white, powdery crust — they should be washed with a solution of three parts water and one part full strength muriatic acid.

Use the acid with caution. Add it slowly to the water, and use rubber gloves. Rinse it well and allow it to dry before painting. If the surface is mildewed, remove it with sal soda solution or a solution of one-half pound of tri-sodium phosphate to a gallon of water. Rinse it well with clear water and allow it to dry.

Here Are Rules To Follow If You Want Better Roses

Like to have a large and exquisitely beautiful rose garden?

Some thousands of home owners have rose gardens ranging from 50 to several thousand plants, including internationally - famous varieties as well as old favorites. Many more home owners of course have rose gardens ranging up to 25 plants or so.

Rose culture not only is a healthy pastime that gets people outdoors, but is one of the most mentally refreshing and beautiful activities one can engage in around the home."

"Home owners who wish to be better informed about roses should do three things," states the American Association of Nurserymen: (1) read the garden pages of their favorite newspaper and magazines, (2) join the American Rose Society, Park of Roses, Columbus, Ohio, a strictly non-profit organization with very moderate dues, and ((3) study nursery catalogues and get advice from their favorite nurserymen.

By following a few rules, the association says you help obtain better blooms, lovelier roses.

1. — When planting, dig a hole wide enough for the roots to spread out without cramping. Dig deep enough so that the soil will be loose for six inches or so below the level of the roots. Mix peat moss into the soil and firm the soil so there will be no large air spaces around the roots.

2. — Fertilize when growth starts in the spring and then again after the heavy blooming period. Do not over-fertilize. A handful of good rose fertilizer will suffice.

3. — Mulching helps roses. Spread peat moss or other mulch on the surface of the ground to a depth of two to four inches round the main stems.

4. — Spray regularly with recommended rose sprays.

5. — Snip off old blooms. This induces heavier later blooming.

6. — Where winters are severe, mound earth around the stems up to eight to ten inches high to help them through the dormant seasons.

Remove the mound in the spring.

Good care of the plants insures more bountiful production of larger blooms.

Gardens Need Right Soil

By E. C. WITTMEYER
Horticulturist, Ohio State

Most home gardeners in Ohio do not have the ideal soil with which to work. In fact, many gardeners must work soil that contains very little organic matter and too much clay.

Such soil is never just right for handling. It is either too wet or too dry. It crusts over following every rain. Crops grow poorly in it. Some gardeners give up in disgust. Others do something about the soil.

If your garden soil is difficult to work, here are some ways to make it easier to handle. Even if you have an ideal soil, these practices will help you to keep it that way.

RYE IS THE standard winter cover crop. Seed, between the rows, at the rate of 3 to 4 pounds per 1000 square feet as soon as possible after August. Sow elsewhere in the garden as soon as crops are removed.

Ryegrass is equally as good and may be used in place of rye, if the seeding can be made before Sept. 15. Seed at the rate of 1 to 2 pounds per 1000 square feet.

In either case, the green crop should be turned under the following spring, preferably before the "grass" is knee-high. Prepare the seedbed for the cover crop by cultivating it lightly; then sow the seed. Raking will cover the seed sufficiently.

If the rye or ryegrass makes a very heavy growth and turns light green in color in the spring, apply 1 to 2 pounds per 100 square feet of a nitrogen fertilizer like ammonium sulfate or nitrate of soda, or 3 to 4 pounds of a complete fertilizer containing 6 to 8 percent nitrogen.

Leaves, crop residues, garbage and other organic materials are valuable sources of organic matter. Gardeners usually find it more convenient to make a compost of these materials. Then, after materials are well rotted, the resulting material can be applied to the garden before plowing or spading.

Pile the material to be rotted in alternate layers with soil. Apply sufficient water to hasten decay and turn the pile once or twice. Under these conditions the material will be well rotted in 6 to 9 months or less. An application of 2 to 3 pounds of complete fertilizer, such as 4-16-8, per 100 square feet of surface are will hasten decay processes.

IF THE GARDEN is a large one, it may be divided into two equal parts. Use one part for the vegetables and the other half for growing a soil improvement crop. Reverse the two sections the following year and continue this procedure until the soil is in good physical condition.

A.—Mixtures of alfalfa, clover and grass may be seeded in March and plowed down the following spring. These materials may be seeded in the rye which has been used for a winter cover crop; however, the rye should be cut in May or early June and left on the ground. Other legumes can also be used.

B.—Corn may be planted thickly in early summer and turned under before rye is seeded in the fall. Buckwheat (1½ to 2 pounds per 1000 square feet) and soybeans (3 to 4 pounds per 1000 square feet) have been used as summer cover crops.

The soil should not be plowed or spaded in the spring until it is sufficiently dry to crumble when worked. The same standard should be applied later in seedbed preparation and cultivation.

The average farm garden will benefit from an application of several loads of manure. Town and city gardeners are finding it more difficult to purchase manure locally. However, if it is available, apply 50 to 75 pounds of well-rotted manure per 100 square feet.

Good drainage is necessary because satisfactory crops cannot be expected on poorly - drained soils. Four - inch drain tiles every 30 feet are recommended, when drainage is needed and where an outlet is available.

Hedges Bring You Privacy

Privacy is the principal reason for planting hedges in urban and suburban areas, while in farm and rural areas hedges are used chiefly to break cold winds in winter and to prevent fertile top soil from blowing away.

Hedges also help to delineate property lines, enclose flower gardens and work areas, to shut off unsightly views as well as give beauty to any setting.

Choose your hedge materials for your particular need with care, advises the American Association of Nurserymen.

The best procedure is to ask your nurseryman for suggestions as to the proper plant materials.

Hedges grow at maturity to heights anywhere from a few inches to 20 feet tall. Low-growing plants, only a few feet tall, generally are used in suburban areas.

Moreover, the plants range from those that drop their leaves in winter, through flowering plants and evergreens.

Many plants not ordinarily thought of for hedges, like roses and azaleas, can make striking hedge plantings for the home property, especially when in flower.

Practically everyone knows of barberry and arborvitae hedges, but fewer people know of ilex or holly which is striking for the purpose.

Ligustrum, and the privets have been widely used. Forsythia, one of the old-timers, still makes an excellent hedge with its burst of yellow in the spring, green foliage in summer, turning purple in the fall.

For a living fence, the floribunda rose is excellent in urban and suburban areas, while the multiflora rose still is widely used on farm properties where it makes an impenetrable fence at lower cost than wood or wire when mature.

Strive for hedges that will be attractive and colorful all year long, to provide all-season beauty.

Good Ladder Spurs Safety

The National Safety Council says accidents involving ladders are among the most common types of home mishaps.

Even more common are accidents resulting from using makeshift ladders—boxes piled atop one another and the like.

It pays to have a good ladder, and to know how to use it safely. Here are some tips:

Before you climb a ladder make sure your shoes are clean of slippery materials and that no paint or any other slippery substance has spilled on the rungs.

Be sure the ladder is resting firmly at the top and bottom at an angle with the ground not less than 75 degrees. The space from the foot of the ladder to the wall shouldn't exceed one - fourth the length of the ladder—easily measured by counting the rungs.

If you're using a stepladder, make sure it is fully opened and locked; and never stand on the top of a stepladder.

Don't paint your ladder. Keep it clean so you can spot any defects in the wood. And if a rung or cross brace is defective, replace it — don't try to patch it with wire.

Before climbing the ladder, make sure it is on solid footing. One leg slowly sinking into soft ground can be a woeful experience if you're perched near the top of the ladder. A number of types of safety shoes are available for use on slippery or soft surfaces.

When working on a ladder do not lean too far backwards or too far to either side. Watch your balance and always keep a firm grip on the ladder with one hand. Never loop your leg around the ladder, but keep both feet planted solidly on the same rung while working.

Modern architecture requires trees and shrubs and landscaping in general to provide warmth and naturalness to man-made buildings, according to the American Association of Nurserymen, whether they are homes, factories, or other structures.

Pools Take On Glamor In Proper Landscaping

By The Associated Press

As more and more backyard swimming pools become part of the American scene, there is a growing demand for pool landscaping services and advice.

Proper landscaping not only adds to the attractiveness of the pool area, but is an important factor in pool cleanliness and comfort.

In order to give pool owners throughout the country a guide to the proper landscaping of their pool area, Lancer Pools, Mineola, Long Island, manufacturer of fiberglass swimming pools, has devised a few basic rules.

Hearty and attractive evergreens suitable for screening and high hedging around the swimming pool are Canadensis, Hemlock, Taxus Cuspeda Capitada, Ilex Crenata Microphylla, Ilex Cornuta and Arbovitae.

For low hedging, the pool owner can choose among Taxus Hatfieldi, Taxus Hicksi or Andromeda. Evergreens should be selected carefully so that dropped foliage will not be prickly or sharp—such as holly, juniper or strictor.

For a low cost, effective summer screen, deciduous flowering shrubs, as well as flowering trees, may be used. They should be planted well back from the pool as the dropping of leaves and flowers add to the chore of keeping the pool clean.

Good choices for ornamental trees are Pink or White Dogwood, European Mountain Ash, White Birch, Flowering Crab Apple, Japanese Willow and a great variety of other.

Remember that flowers planted too close to the pool attract bees and other nuisance flying insects. Spent flowers will fall into the pool on windy days.

Ugly banks may be turned into beautiful rock or ledge gardens with a generous sprinkling of perennials for permanent settings.

A liberal amount of annuals such as Verbena, Petunias, Phlox, Marigold, Ageratum or Sweet Alyssum should be included for color.

Some of the most desirable annuals that can be included for hilly areas are Geraniums, Fuschias, Begonias, Lantanas and Calias. In shaded areas, pool owners should select from Tuberous Begonias, Gloxemas and flat or creeping evergreen.

Most swimming pool installations require fencing that can easily be brightened with vine type plants: Clematia, Trumpet, Vine, Wisteria and Rambler.

Six Rules Are Outlined For Bare Root Planting

Man couldn't live on earth without trees and shrubs to produce the oxygen we breathe, although ordinarily we think of trees and shrubs only for the welcome shade, the flowers, the fruits and the general beauty they bring into our lives.

Planting of bare root nursery stock is fairly simple, if a few rules are observed.

1.—Holes should be roomy enough to accommodate the roots without cramping.

2.—Good soil should be put at the bottom of the hole around the roots.

4.—Drainage should be good.

5.—Stock should be protected from wind and sun before planting.

6.—Top should be pruned back one-third to compensate for root damage.

Fence Should Follow Property Line Closely

When building a fence, don't guess about your property line. Have a survey made and put the fence exactly on the line.

If you set a fence in from your property line and fail to correct it for 15 or 30 years, the land outside the fence may be forfeited and may cause title trouble in any future sale.

Tips Offered On Staircases

AP Newsfeatures

When you plan to convert your basement into a recreation room, don't overlook the probable necessity of remodeling the stairs.

You won't want an outdated intrusion into a modern room.

First of all, you want the stairs to be safe. If you plan to build a new staircase yourself, here are some tips on safety and design.

The most desirable staircase angle is 30 to 35 degrees. The relation between risers and treads also is important for safety and ease of walking.

The rule is that the sum of one tread and one riser should equal 17 or 18 inches. A riser of seven inches and tread of 10 to 11 inches depth is ideal.

Handrails usually are placed 32 or 33 inches above the steps. Ideal stairs are three feet wide, which will allow two people to pass comfortably.

Stairs with open risers will further the feeling of openness and lightness in your room.

One idea is to suspend the stairs. One end of each tread rests on a shelf angle fastened to the wall. The other end is pierced by a 1½-inch round metal rod with a flange on the bottom of the step and at the ceiling.

In another open-riser construction — which does not need to be against a wall — the side boards of the steps form structural support. Steps rest on cleats on the inside face of the side boards. Railing and supports can be of black iron.

Treads should be of hardwood, preferably oak. An asphalt, rubber or cork tile finish provides an easy-to-clean surface.

If your present steps are well made and safe, but not attractive, you can hide them with a storage wall or a room divider.

Trees and shrubs planted on the home property in most instances will increase in value by approximately 20 per cent each year until maturity, according to the American Association of Nurserymen.

Gardens Need Right Soil

By E. C. WITTMEYER
Horticulturist, Ohio State

Most home gardeners in Ohio do not have the ideal soil with which to work. In fact, many gardeners must work soil that contains very little organic matter and too much clay.

Such soil is never just right for handling. It is either too wet or too dry. It crusts over following every rain. Crops grow poorly in it. Some gardeners give up in disgust. Others do something about the soil.

If your garden soil is difficult to work, here are some ways to make it easier to handle. Even if you have an ideal soil, these practices will help you to keep it that way.

RYE IS THE standard winter cover crop. Seed, between the rows, at the rate of 3 to 4 pounds per 1000 square feet as soon as possible after August. Sow elsewhere in the garden as soon as crops are removed.

Ryegrass is equally as good and may be used in place of rye, if the seeding can be made before Sept. 15. Seed at the rate of 1 to 2 pounds per 1000 square feet.

In either case, the green crop should be turned under the following spring, preferably before the "grass" is knee-high. Prepare the seedbed for the cover crop by cultivating it lightly; then sow the seed. Raking will cover the seed sufficiently.

If the rye or ryegrass makes a very heavy growth and turns light green in color in the spring, apply 1 to 2 pounds per 100 square feet of a nitrogen fertilizer like ammonium sulfate or nitrate of soda, or 3 to 4 pounds of a complete fertilizer containing 6 to 8 percent nitrogen.

Leaves, crop residues, garbage and other organic materials are valuable sources of organic matter. Gardeners usually find it more convenient to make a compost of these materials. Then, after materials are well rotted, the resulting material can be applied to the garden before plowing or spading.

Pile the material to be rotted in alternate layers with soil. Apply sufficient water to hasten decay and turn the pile once or twice. Under these conditions the material will be well rotted in 6 to 9 months or less. An application of 2 to 3 pounds of complete fertilizer, such as 4-16-8, per 100 square feet of surface are will hasten decay processes.

IF THE GARDEN is a large one, it may be divided into two equal parts. Use one part for the vegetables and the other half for growing a soil improvement crop. Reverse the two sections the following year and continue this procedure until the soil is in good physical condition.

A.—Mixtures of alfalfa, clover and grass may be seeded in March and plowed down the following spring. These materials may be seeded in the rye which has been used for a winter cover crop; however, the rye should be cut in May or early June and left on the ground. Other legumes can also be used.

B.—Corn may be planted thickly in early summer and turned under before rye is seeded in the fall. Buckwheat (1½ to 2 pounds per 1000 square feet) and soybeans (3 to 4 pounds per 1000 square feet) have been used as summer cover crops.

The soil should not be plowed or spaded in the spring until it is sufficiently dry to crumble when worked. The same standard should be applied later in seedbed preparation and cultivation.

The average farm garden will benefit from an application of several loads of manure. Town and city gardeners are finding it more difficult to purchase manure locally. However, if it is available, apply 50 to 75 pounds of well-rotted manure per 100 square feet.

Good drainage is necessary because satisfactory crops cannot be expected on poorly-drained soils. Four-inch drain tiles every 30 feet are recommended, when drainage is needed and where an outlet is available.

Hedges Bring You Privacy

Privacy is the principal reason for planting hedges in urban and suburban areas, while in farm and rural areas hedges are used chiefly to break cold winds in winter and to prevent fertile top soil from blowing away.

Hedges also help to delineate property lines, enclose flower gardens and work areas, to shut off unsightly views as well as give beauty to any setting.

Choose your hedge materials for your particular need with care, advises the American Association of Nurserymen.

The best procedure is to ask your nurseryman for suggestions as to the proper plant materials.

Hedges grow at maturity to heights anywhere from a few inches to 20 feet tall. Low-growing plants, only a few feet tall, generally are used in suburban areas.

Moreover, the plants range from those that drop their leaves in winter, through flowering plants and evergreens.

Many plants not ordinarily thought of for hedges, like roses and azaleas, can make striking hedge plantings for the home property, especially when in flower.

Practically everyone knows of barberry and arborvitae hedges, but fewer people know of ilex or holly which is striking for the purpose.

Ligustrum, and the privets have been widely used. Forsythia, one of the old-timers, still makes an excellent hedge with its burst of yellow in the spring, green foliage in summer, turning purple in the fall.

For a living fence, the floribunda rose is excellent in urban and suburban areas, while the multiflora rose still is widely used on farm properties where it makes an impenetrable fence at lower cost than wood or wire when mature.

Strive for hedges that will be attractive and colorful all year long, to provide all-season beauty.

Good Ladder Spurs Safety

The National Safety Council says accidents involving ladders are among the most common types of home mishaps.

Even more common are accidents resulting from using makeshift ladders—boxes piled atop one another and the like.

It pays to have a good ladder, and to know how to use it safely. Here are some tips:

Before you climb a ladder make sure your shoes are clean of slippery materials and that no paint or any other slippery substance has spilled on the rungs.

Be sure the ladder is resting firmly at the top and bottom at an angle with the ground not less than 75 degrees. The space from the foot of the ladder to the wall shouldn't exceed one-fourth the length of the ladder—easily measured by counting the rungs.

If you're using a stepladder, make sure it is fully opened and locked; and never stand on the top of a stepladder.

Don't paint your ladder. Keep it clean so you can spot any defects in the wood. And if a rung or cross brace is defective, replace it — don't try to patch it with wire.

Before climbing the ladder, make sure it is on solid footing. One leg slowly sinking into soft ground can be a woeful experience if you're perched near the top of the ladder. A number of types of safety shoes are available for use on slippery or soft surfaces.

When working on a ladder do not lean too far backwards or too far to either side. Watch your balance and always keep a firm grip on the ladder with one hand. Never loop your leg around the ladder, but keep both feet planted solidly on the same rung while working.

Modern architecture requires trees and shrubs and landscaping in general to provide warmth and naturalness to man-made buildings, according to the American Association of Nurserymen, whether they are homes, factories, or other structures.

Pools Take On Glamor In Proper Landscaping

By The Associated Press

As more and more backyard swimming pools become part of the American scene, there is a growing demand for pool landscaping services and advice.

Proper landscaping not only adds to the attractiveness of the pool area, but is an important factor in pool cleanliness and comfort.

In order to give pool owners throughout the country a guide to the proper landscaping of their pool area, Lancer Pools, Mineola, Long Island, manufacturer of fiberglass swimming pools, has devised a few basic rules.

Hearty and attractive evergreens suitable for screening and high hedging around the swimming pool are Canadensis, Hemlock, Taxus Cuspeda Capitada, Ilex Crenata Microphylla, Ilex Cornuta and Arbovitae.

For low hedging, the pool owner can choose among Taxus Hatfieldi, Taxus Hicksi or Andromeda. Evergreens should be selected carefully so that dropped foliage will not be prickly or sharp—such as holly, juniper or strictor.

For a low cost, effective summer screen, deciduous flowering shrubs, as well as flowering trees, may be used. They should be planted well back from the pool as the dropping of leaves and flowers add to the chore of keeping the pool clean.

Good choices for ornamental trees are Pink or White Dogwood, European Mountain Ash, White Birch, Flowering Crab Apple, Japanese Willow and a great variety of other.

Remember that flowers planted too close to the pool attract bees and other nuisance flying insects. Spent flowers will fall into the pool on windy days.

Ugly banks may be turned into beautiful rock or ledge gardens with a generous sprinkling of perennials for permanent settings.

A liberal amount of annuals such as Verbena, Petunias, Phlox, Marigold, Ageratum or Sweet Alyssum should be included for color.

Some of the most desirable annuals that can be included for hilly areas are Geraniums, Fuschias, Begonias, Lantanas and Calias. In shaded areas, pool owners should select from Tuberous Begonias, Gloxemas and flat or creeping evergreen.

Most swimming pool installations require fencing that can easily be brightened with vine type plants: Clematia, Trumpet, Vine, Wisteria and Rambler.

Six Rules Are Outlined For Bare Root Planting

Man couldn't live on earth without trees and shrubs to produce the oxygen we breathe, although ordinarily we think of trees and shrubs only for the welcome shade, the flowers, the fruits and the general beauty they bring into our lives.

Planting of bare root nursery stock is fairly simple, if a few rules are observed.

1.—Holes should be roomy enough to accommodate the roots without cramping.

2.—Good soil should be put at the bottom of the hole around the roots.

4.—Drainage should be good.

5.—Stock should be protected from wind and sun before planting.

6.—Top should be pruned back one-third to compensate for root damage.

Fence Should Follow Property Line Closely

When building a fence, don't guess about your property line. Have a survey made and put the fence exactly on the line.

If you set a fence in from your property line and fail to correct it for 15 or 30 years, the land outside the fence may be forfeited and may cause title trouble in any future sale.

Tips Offered On Staircases

AP Newsfeatures

When you plan to convert your basement into a recreation room, don't overlook the probable necessity of remodeling the stairs.

You won't want an outdated intrusion into a modern room.

First of all, you want the stairs to be safe. If you plan to build a new staircase yourself, here are some tips on safety and design.

The most desirable staircase angle is 30 to 35 degrees. The relation between risers and treads also is important for safety and ease of walking.

The rule is that the sum of one tread and one riser should equal 17 or 18 inches. A riser of seven inches and tread of 10 to 11 inches depth is ideal.

Handrails usually are placed 32 or 33 inches above the steps. Ideal stairs are three feet wide, which will allow two people to pass comfortably.

Stairs with open risers will further the feeling of openness and lightness in your room.

One idea is to suspend the stairs. One end of each tread rests on a shelf angle fastened to the wall. The other end is pierced by a 1½-inch round metal rod with a flange on the bottom of the step and at the ceiling.

In another open-riser construction — which does not need to be against a wall — the side boards of the steps form structural support. Steps rest on cleats on the inside face of the side boards. Railing and supports can be of black iron.

Treads should be of hardwood, preferably oak. An asphalt, rubber or cork tile finish provides an easy-to-clean surface.

If your present steps are well made and safe, but not attractive, you can hide them with a storage wall or a room divider.

Trees and shrubs planted on the home property in most instances will increase in value by approximately 20 per cent each year until maturity, according to the American Association of Nurserymen.

Repaper House? You Can Do It By Following Rules

There is a widespread notion among do-it-yourself enthusiasts that papering a wall is one job that should only be tackled by the pros. Don't believe it.

Granted, you have to proceed with caution. But if you follow a few simple rules and a set procedure, there is no reason an average home handyman can't repaper his entire house.

First make sure the wall surface is smooth and firm. You can paper over old paper, but be sure there are no loose edges or grease or dirt stains. If there are bad stains that likely will show through, you had better remove the old paper.

Use a large brush dipped frequently in warm water for this job. After soaking the paper thoroughly, scrape it off with a putty knife. Then sand off the rough edges and you're ready to go.

THE EQUIPMENT you will need includes a sharp knife or razor, a good pair of shears, a straight edge ruler, a putty knife, paste (a plasticized type is best for amateurs), a six-inch brush and a plumb line. To smooth out the seams, use a roller, soft brush or sponge.

You can make a work table out of a 4-by-8 piece of plywood and two sawhorses. Make sure it's good and firm.

If possible, your fist strip of paper should go next to a door frame. Pick the least conspicuous one in the room, because this is the point where you will end, as well as begin, and the pattern may not match.

Now comes the main rule; violation of it has been the downfall of many a would-be paper hanger; hang the paper according to the plumb line, not the wall. Walls are not always straight; a string with a weight attached is.

The first strip of paper is the most important. If you don't get it up straight—according to the plumb line—the rest of the job will be crooked too.

If your paper is 18 inches in width, measure 17½ inches from the door frame and fasten your plumb line there. Hang the paper along the edge of the plumb line. The half-inch extra will allow you to fit the paper against the door frame even if the frame isn't perfectly straight.

—:—

CUT EACH successive strip eight or 10 inches longer than necessary so you won't have any trouble matching the pattern. If the paper has an unusually large pattern you might have to make an even more generous allowance.

It is best not to overlap the strips more than one-half inch. If each overlap is the same size, it makes for a neater job.

Be sure to remove all wall light fixtures or plates, hot air register covers and so forth before you begin. Paper right over the spaces, just as though they weren't there, then cut out the holes with a sharp knife or razor. Don't worry about locating them. They'll be easy enough to find by tapping the wall surface.

In all your trimming, make sure your knife or razor is sharp. You should use fairly swift, straight strokes where possible, and this can't be done with a dull knife. All trimming should be done before the paste dries.

Wallpaper still is the most widely used wall covering, and there are almost as many types on the market today as there are designs.

Whether you select a washable paper for the kitchen or bathroom, or a luxurious silk damask for the living room, hanging it yourself it not impossible.

Here Are Three Tips For Proper Storage

Fundamental storage principles remain the same, no matter what the size or design of your home or the needs of your family. They are:

1.—Objects should be stored as close as possible to the point of their most frequent use.

2.—They should be free of the weight of other objects.

3.—They should be both visible and accessible.

Why not compile a storage problem notebook? Every time you have to walk into another room for an article or have trouble finding an article or getting it out, make a note of it.

By analyzing the notebook, you will discover your real storage problems. Then analyze your rooms for storage space and soon you will have a place for everything and everything in its place.

More Homes Turning To Circuit-Breakers

Modern circuit-breakers are replacing old-fashioned fuse boxes in more and more homes today because of the obvious advantages.

Instead of blowing a fuse when a wire is overloaded, the circuit-breaker — which looks like a light switch — trips to the "off" position. Instead of replacing a fuse, you simply switch the circuit-breaker back to "on." It will not go on if the original interruption in power still is present.

Underwriters Laboratories make it mandatory that a circuit-breaker open and close without failure more than 10,000 times before acceptance.

Proper Steps Outlined If Painting Aluminum

Many aluminum manufacturers offer their products in a variety of factory-applied paint finishes. However, it is easy for do-it-yourselfers to paint unprotected aluminum at home.

New aluminum must be washed with a proprietary phosphoric acid compound to remove its surface oil film. The solution should be left on for about 10 minutes and then rinsed away with clean water.

Weathered aluminum must be thoroughly free of loose dirt and oxide by wire brushing or lightly sanding the surface, followed by removing any oil and grease with detergent or paint thinner.

When the aluminum surface is thoroughly clean and dry, it should be primed with any quality conventional primer of either metal or wood variety.

However, for particularly corrosive atmospheres, the best primer is a coat of zinc chromate. Aluminum paint can be used as a prime coat and if its color is acceptable can also be used as the finish coat.

After the prime coat has dried hard, follow with one or two coats of finish paint. Nearly every paint and enamel which is suitable for wood or metal will produce satisfactory results.

Must Be Crowded

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Five thousand persons live at 4129 33rd St. in Des Moines — Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Thousand and their three children.

There Are No Shortcuts In Refinishing Of Floor

Refinishing a hardwood floor is one do-it-yourself project for which there are no short cuts. If you expect the best results, three important rules must be followed strictly:

1.—The floor must be clean. Use alkaline cleaners, solvents or hot water to remove all dirt, oil, grease, wax and the like.

2.—The floor must be properly primed. One coat never is enough for unfinished surfaces (which includes old surfaces sanded down to the bare wood). The primer must be a proper kind, correctly thinned.

3.—Use only materials recommended for floor finishing, and thin them and apply them exactly as recommended on the label.

A badly-worn floor should be sanded down to the bare wood. Use a power sander with the grain to do the job smoothly and easily. If the old varnished floor is in fair condition it may require no preparation other than thorough cleaning.

After thoroughly dusting a well-sanded floor, open grain woods (particularly oak) must then be filled with a wood filler.

Reduce the paste wood filler to a paint consistency and apply length-wise with the grain using a three or four inch brush. Don't try to cover more than a strip about two feet wide at a time.

A whitish cast will begin to appear at the starting point, indicating the filler is drying properly. When this happens begin to wipe off the excess filler.

Rub it off across the grain with burlap or excelsior, leaving the filler only in the pores of the wood. Sweep off the excess filler particles and allow the floor to dry overnight.

Next apply a primer coat of good grade varnish thinned as recommended by the manufacturer. Let it stand overnight, sand it and dust it well. Then apply one or two top coats of unthinned floor varnish. Allow the first coat to stand 24 hours, then sand it and apply the second coat.

If you plan to paint the floor, new wood needs only to be clean, smooth and dry. Prime it and finish it according to the label on the can of paint you intend to use.

Previously painted floors in good condition need only to be cleaned. But if the surface is in poor condition or thick with previous coats of paint it should be removed down to the bare wood and finished as though it were new wood.

New concrete floors should be roughened by etching for better adhesion of the paint. You can use a solution of one part full strength muriatic acid to three parts water.

After about 20 minutes, rinse the floor thoroughly and allow it to dry.

Previously painted concrete floors usually require no etching, but should be spot primed and painted according to the manufacturer's directions.

Experts Hear About Sensitive Animals

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Some tropical fish can distinguish between glass rods whose diameters differ by only two millimeters, a "brainstorming" session of aeronautical engineers and scientists was told.

They also learned that rattlesnakes have a tiny infrared sensor between nostril and eye that is sensitive to a temperature change as small as .001 degree.

The "brainstorming" at Ryan Aeronautical Co. had to do with whether such natural supersenses could be applied or copied or otherwise made use of in the aircraft-missile industry.

Call For Sue Smith Could Cause Confusion

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — A call for Sue Smith at Miami University could bring a lot of confusion.

A check of student records shows seven coeds enrolled this fall who answer to the name of Sue Smith.

They are Susan Kay Smith of Lakeside, Ohio; Suzanne K. Smith of Rossburg, Ohio; Sue Caroline Smith of Birmingham, Mich.; (Mrs.) Sally Sue Vinnedge Smith of Hamilton, Ohio; Susan Arline Smith of Indianapolis, Ind.; Carol Susan Smith of Los Angeles and Sandra Sue Smith of Toledo, Ohio.

Careful Thought Urged Before Cutting Trees

Here's a word to home owners—if there are trees on the property, try to save them. It will save you a great deal of expense later on.

Before leveling your yard for improvements be sure to call in arborist and have him make a thorough inspection of the trees.

Through his experience, he can designate those trees that should be saved, recommend measures for saving them to give your home that extra value.

By analyzing the notebook, you will discover your real storage problems. Then analyze your rooms for storage space and soon you will have a place for everything and everything in its place.

More Homes Turning To Circuit-Breakers

Modern circuit-breakers are replacing old-fashioned fuse boxes in more and more homes today because of the obvious advantages.

Instead of blowing a fuse when a wire is overloaded, the circuit-breaker — which looks like a light switch — trips to the "off" position. Instead of replacing a fuse, you simply switch the circuit-breaker back to "on." It will not go on if the original interruption in power still is present.

Underwriters Laboratories make it mandatory that a circuit-breaker open and close without failure more than 10,000 times before acceptance.

Proper Steps Outlined If Painting Aluminum

Many aluminum manufacturers offer their products in a variety of factory-applied paint finishes. However, it is easy for do-it-yourselfers to paint unprotected aluminum at home.

New aluminum must be washed with a proprietary phosphoric acid compound to remove its surface oil film. The solution should be left on for about 10 minutes and then rinsed away with clean water.

Weathered aluminum must be thoroughly free of loose dirt and oxide by wire brushing or lightly sanding the surface, followed by removing any oil and grease with detergent or paint thinner.

When the aluminum surface is thoroughly clean and dry, it should be primed with any quality conventional primer of either metal or wood variety.

However, for particularly corrosive atmospheres, the best primer is a coat of zinc chromate. Aluminum paint can be used as a prime coat and if its color is acceptable can also be used as the finish coat.

After the prime coat has dried hard, follow with one or two coats of finish paint. Nearly every paint and enamel which is suitable for wood or metal will produce satisfactory results.

Must Be Crowded

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Five thousand persons live at 4129 33rd St. in Des Moines — Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Thousand and their three children.

There Are No Shortcuts In Refinishing Of Floor

Refinishing a hardwood floor is one do-it-yourself project for which there are no short cuts. If you expect the best results, three important rules must be followed strictly:

1.—The floor must be clean. Use alkaline cleaners, solvents or hot water to remove all dirt, oil, grease, wax and the like.

2.—The floor must be properly primed. One coat never is enough for unfinished surfaces (which includes old surfaces sanded down to the bare wood). The primer must be a proper kind, correctly thinned.

3.—Use only materials recommended for floor finishing, and thin them and apply them exactly as recommended on the label.

A badly-worn floor should be sanded down to the bare wood. Use a power sander with the grain to do the job smoothly and easily. If the old varnished floor is in fair condition it may require no preparation other than thorough cleaning.

After thoroughly dusting a well-sanded floor, open grain woods (particularly oak) must then be filled with a wood filler.

Reduce the paste wood filler to a paint consistency and apply length-wise with the grain using a three or four inch brush. Don't try to cover more than a strip about two feet wide at a time.

A whitish cast will begin to appear at the starting point, indicating the filler is drying properly. When this happens begin to wipe off the excess filler.

Rub it off across the grain with burlap or excelsior, leaving the filler only in the pores of the wood.

Sweep off the excess filler particles and allow the floor to dry overnight.

Next apply a primer coat of good grade varnish thinned as recommended by the manufacturer. Let it stand overnight, sand it and dust it well. Then apply one or two top coats of unthinned floor varnish. Allow the first coat to stand 24 hours, then sand it and apply the second coat.

If you plan to paint the floor, new wood needs only to be clean, smooth and dry. Prime it and finish it according to the label on the can of paint you intend to use.

Previously painted floors in good condition need only to be cleaned. But if the surface is in poor condition or thick with previous coats of paint it should be removed down to the bare wood and finished as though it were new wood.

New concrete floors should be roughened by etching for better adhesion of the paint. You can use a solution of one part full strength muriatic acid to three parts water.

After about 20 minutes, rinse the floor thoroughly and allow it to dry.

Previously painted concrete floors usually require no etching, but should be spot primed and painted according to the manufacturer's directions.

Experts Hear About Sensitive Animals

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Some tropical fish can distinguish between glass rods whose diameters differ by only two millimeters, a "brainstorming" session of aeronautical engineers and scientists was told.

They also learned that rattlesnakes have a tiny infrared sensor between nostril and eye that is sensitive to a temperature change as small as .001 degree.

The "brainstorming" at Ryan Aeronautical Co. had to do with whether such natural supersenses could be applied or copied or otherwise made use of in the aircraft-missile industry.

Call For Sue Smith Could Cause Confusion

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — A call for Sue Smith at Miami University could bring a lot of confusion.

A check of student records shows seven coeds enrolled this fall who answer to the name of Sue Smith.

They are Susan Kay Smith of Lakeside, Ohio; Suzanne K. Smith of Rossburg, Ohio; Sue Caroline Smith of Birmingham, Mich.; (Mrs.) Sally Sue Vinnedge Smith of Hamilton, Ohio; Susan Arline Smith of Indianapolis, Ind.; Carol Susan Smith of Los Angeles and Sandra Sue Smith of Toledo, Ohio.

Careful Thought Urged Before Cutting Trees

Here's a word to home owners—if there are trees on the property, try to save them. It will save you a great deal of expense later on.

Before leveling your yard for improvements be sure to call in arborist and have him make a thorough inspection of the trees.

Through his experience, he can designate those trees that should be saved, recommend measures for saving them to give your home that extra value.

Danger Signs Are Listed In Home Wiring

By The Associated Press

Do the lights in your home go dim momentarily when a major appliance turns on?

Do you have frequent trouble with blown fuses or circuit-breakers tripping off?

Does your TV picture shrink when too many lights or appliances are on at the same time?

If any of these happen regularly in your home chances are your wiring is inadequate. These are three danger signals.

There now are more than 150 electric appliances on the market and many home owners have accumlated many of them without realizing how much of a drain they are putting on the wiring of, say, a 30-year-old home.

To understand how your wiring works, compare the flow of electricity into your home with the flow of water through pipes.

Outside your home there is a main pipe with plenty of power in it. The problem is to get enough of it into the house when and where it is needed. Just as small pipes restrict the flow of water, small wires restrict the flow of electricity.

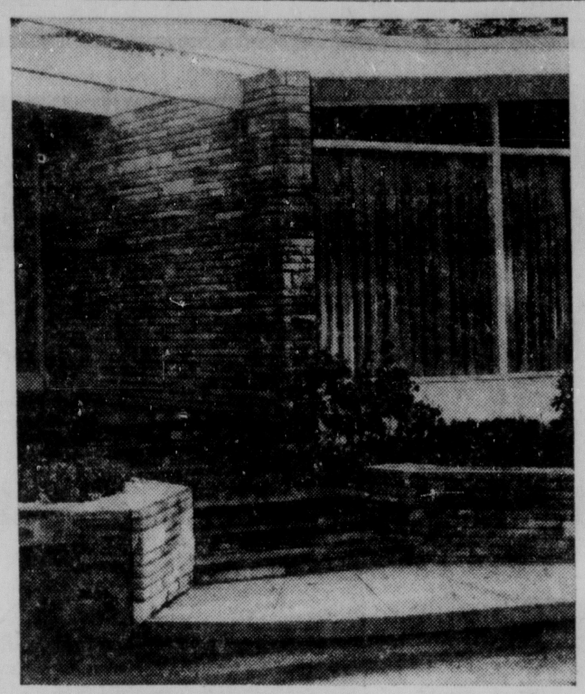
Electrical experts offer four of what they consider essential requirements for persons planning to buy or modernize a home:

1.—A three - wire, 00-ampere service entrance. A dependable electrical contractor will help you determine your needs, but be sure to plan for the future.

2.—Three kinds of branch circuits: several general purpose circuits for lights all over the house; several small appliance circuits for outlets in the kitchen, laundry and dining area; and one separate circuit for each major appliance such as washer, air conditioner, freezer and the like.

3.—Adequate outlets, including one ceiling fixture lighting outlet in each room; convenience outlets in living areas at least every six feet along the floor line; one outlet for each four feet of work counter in the kitchen plus one for the refrigerator, a weatherproof outlet for each major appliance.

4.—Adequate switches, including one at the latch side of every doorway or room entrance; at the top and bottom of every stairway; at bedside for control of bedroom ceiling lights; inside switches for outdoor lights as well as switches in the garage or terrace.



ELEGANT ENTRY. Marble, blue stone and slate blend harmoniously to lend distinction to the entry way of a modern home.

PRACTICAL BEAUTY. A double retaining wall of limestone not only protects an embankment from erosion, but enhances the landscaping of a small plot of ground.

Garage Roof Turns 'Patio'

By The Associated Press

HASBROUCK HEIGHTS, N. J. — Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Korilla park their car under their patio.

This is the best way to describe the Korilla's ingenious remodeling project, because the new structure adjoining their 60-year-old home serves as much as an outdoor relaxing and entertaining area as it does a two-car garage.

The lay of the land around the Korilla home made the garage top patio possible; but it points up what can be done by home owners who use their imagination as well as their savings.

The Korilla home is built on a hillside and the garage was constructed adjacent to the house into the hill. The short driveway is at street level and the garage roof at first floor level.

Korilla decided simply to finish off the roof as a patio, and later he plans to add doors so he can step onto the patio from either the living room or dining room, both of which overlook it.

Two steps down from the rear of the patio is the back yard — level and with a well kept lawn and border gardens. A flagstone walk leads from the patio into the yard.

A four-foot-wide planter serves as a wall for the high front of the patio and an artistic brick wall runs down the side opposite the house and sweeps in an arc across the rear of the patio.

Another distinctive feature is the floor of the patio.

Korilla filled all the cracks in the concrete, gave it two good coats of primer and a finish coat of brick colored rubber based outdoor paint applied with a brush using a square wooden stencil. It has the effect of red tile and can be repainted square by square if any spot should become worn or cracked.

A colorful umbrella and other attractive patio furnishings completed the job.

CURVED PLANTINGS, for the informal setting, look lovelier and more professional than an arrangement that simply follows the straight lines of the house and fence. Low shrubs provide lush beauty and a natural look; they may be combined with taller trees most effectively too.

Your 'Wasted' Space Should Be Put To Use

By The Associated Press

The "wasted" space under your stairway often can add to the usefulness or sparkle of your home.

If you have a storage space shortage, look under the stairs. Even if there is a closet there now, chances are some space is going to waste under the lower stairs.

Parallel compartments can house folding tables and chairs, game boards and other flat, shallow articles.

A desk in the under-the-stairs space may be the answer if you lack a den and need a secluded spot to do paper work. Quite a lot of storage space can be obtained here, too, if you build-in the desk to fill the entire area.

Another possibility — if you've solved all the utilitarian problems —is to create a real conversation piece by deciding the space under the stairs is for the birds.

Set a large birdcage on the floor. Other cages can stand on this one or be suspended from above.

This can be the place where you stamp your own individuality most firmly on your home — with, if you prefer, an acquarium or a collection of objects of art.

Old Landscaping Can Prove An Eyesore

Overgrown, outmoded landscaping on home property is an eyesore that reduces the value of land and homes in the immediate vicinity.

Everyone has seen this in neighborhoods that have become run down.

Remodeling of landscaping is a key step in home improvement, says the American Association of Nurserymen, homes in areas where the grounds are well-landscaped not only maintain but increase their values in the real estate markets, and they provide better and more relaxed "garden living" for the family.

Entire real estate developments or other residential areas can be upgraded or downgraded by the "looks" of the landscaping alone, apart of the quality of the home construction.

Almost 1¼ million immigrants have settled in Australia since World War II.

Painter's Primer For The Handyman

By JULES LOH
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A paint job can give your home a fresh new look inside and out. But if you're like most home owners you probably feel there are some things you should learn before deciding to tackle the job yourself. This "painter's primer" should answer most of your questions.

Q. How can I tell how much paint I will need?

A. Most paints cover about 500 square feet per gallon. If the surface is unusually rough, dry or porous, figure on 20 per cent more paint. Narrow lap siding takes 100 per cent more paint than wide siding and corrugated metal surfaces take 33⅓ per cent more paint than smooth metal. The first coat on concrete block usually requires 50 per cent more paint.

Q. What type of paint thinner is best?

A. All paints are formulated according to exact specifications and all describe the proper thinner to use on the label of the can. Read the directions carefully and use only the exact quantity of thinner recommended.

—:—

Q. DOES THE color of paint vary from one can to another?

A. Often it does, so always try to finish at least one entire wall or panel from the same mixture. Where possible, start a new can of paint only at corners or intersections, never in the middle of a wall or ceiling.

Q. Is the agitation given the paint on the dealer's mechanical mixer enough to mix the paint thoroughly?

A. Only if the paint is used within a short period of time. The durability and color of paint depend on thorough and proper mixing, and the importance of it can't be overemphasized.

Q. What's the best way to mix paint?

A. First pour the liquid from the top of a newly-opened can into another container. Stir the remaining gummy matter until it becomes a smooth paste. Slowly replace the liquid, stirring continuously. Then pour the contents back and forth from one can to another several times. Stir the paint occasionally while you're using it.

Q. What if you're intermixing colors?

A. Always ascertain from your dealer that the colors you plan to mix are the same basic types of paint and can be mixed. Then mix it in quantities sufficient to cover an entire wall or panel without running out; the second batch may vary a fraction in hue. It's always best to overestimate the amount—the leftover paint can be used for touch-up if you label your various leftover cans carefully.

Q. HOW LARGE a brush should I use?

A. Select a good 3- or 4-inch brush for interior walls and ceilings; 2- or 2½-inch varnish brush for casings, doors and baseboards; and a 1 or 1½-inch sash brush for windows.

Q. What's the best way to clean a brush?

A. After you're through painting with oil paints or enamels, wipe the excess from the brush (use a putty knife to squegee it out) and clean it with turpentine, kerosene or mineral spirits. Then it can be washed with warm water and soap and stored dry. Brushes used in shellac or alcohol stain should be cleaned with alcohol; and brushes used in latex paint should be washed with warm soap and water.

Q. Does a new brush require any special preparation?

A. Yes. If you plan to use it for oil painting or enameling, you should soak the brush in linseed oil for as long as a week before using it. Drill a hole in the handle and suspend the brush on wire in the can of linseed oil. Never stand a brush on its bristles.

Q. Should I use a spray gun?

A. You can, and frequently it is the easiest way if you have a number of portable items to paint. Properly used, it will give a smooth, uniform result. Make sure you provide adequate ventilation.

Q. DOES THE paint need any special thinning?

A. A good household type spraying unit with a compressor capable of developing 30 to 40 pounds of pressure should atomize most paint as it comes from the can. Some of the heavier body paints require 10 to 15 per cent thinning.

Q. Should I use a brush or roller?

A. The roller leaves a pleasant, light-stippled effect which frequently covers small blemishes better than brushing. It is perhaps the easiest way to paint a ceiling.

Q. Are there different types of rollers?

A. Yes. The pan-type roller is the most widely used. There also is a magazine type roller in which the paint is stored inside the cylinder, and pressure type rollers in which the paint is forced through a hose into the inside of the roller.

Q. How about the cover?

A. When you buy the roller, be sure to get the right type cover. Use mohair (short nap) for oil paints, latex and rubber based paints, enamels and varnishes. Use wool (long nap) for rough stucco and concrete, fences and other surfaces where a heavier texture is required.

Q. Is there any trick to using a roller?

A. No; simply roll the paint on the surface with a light, even stroke. Start each new load of paint somewhat away from the already painted surface and roll toward the completed work. To avoid laps, roll the paint vertically, overlapping each stroke 50 per cent, and finish with light, vertical strokes.

Location Of Key Importance In Service For Thermostat

AP Newsfeatures

Do you have trouble keeping all the rooms of your house at an even temperature during the winter months?

It could be your thermostat is in the wrong place. Location is extremely important, because the familiar household servant must measure room air temperature — and nothing else.

It's much easier to advise where the thermostat should not be placed than where it should be because home designs differ and family living habits vary. But here is a list of do's and don'ts that may be helpful:

Put the thermostat in one of the most lived-in rooms of the house, such as the living room, den or family room. The room should have at least one wall exposed to the outdoors, and some windows.

Install it in a room that gets a minimum of direct sunshine during the day. A great deal of sun shining into a room (especially one facing due south) will partially heat the room. As a result, the thermostat is misled and won't call for heat even though other rooms may be in need of it.

Mount it about four feet from the floor. It will perform well at this height, be easy to read and adjust and high enough to avoid tampering by children.

Place it on an inside wall at least one stud space from the outside wall. It never should be located on an outside wall.

Don't locate it in a room with a fireplace. If you do, the fire will heat the room and the thermostat will remain off even though other rooms may be chilly.

Don't place a lamp, TV set, radio or any other heat-releasing appliance near the thermostat. Heat from the appliance will warm the thermostat and it won't call for heat when it should.

Don't mount it in a room close to an outside door or it will respond to the surge of cold outdoor air every time the door is opened.

Also avoid "hiding" the thermostat behind a door, in a closet or among books on a shelf.

The best idea is to suggest to your heating dealer where you would like to have the thermostat installed — but don't insist on it.

There may be good reasons why your preferred location would be a mistake, so let your heating expert make the final decision.

Deputies Get Expert Help In Opening Safe

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Sheriff's deputies had expert help readily available to open a rusty 300-pound safe pulled from the Miami River.

They simply asked a 20-year-old prisoner in the county jail to apply his talents on the safe. He cracked it.

Attractive Appearance Possible In Bathroom

If your bathroom fixtures look outdated but are in good condition, there is no need to replace them to give your bathroom an up-to-date, attractive appearance.

Consider a bathroom with tub along one side wall, toilet and basin along the other and clothes hamper at one end.

The wash basin can be surrounded with a counter top, a hamper built in below, a medicine cabinet built into the wall above and large mirror erected on one side, to hide the toilet.

A plastic shower curtain can curve around the entire two sides of the tub. A dressing table might take advantage of the space gained by eliminating the hamper.

The world's most widely known limestone is found in southern Indiana.

Painter's Primer For The Handyman

By JULES LOH
AP Newsfeatures Writer

A paint job can give your home a fresh new look inside and out. But if you're like most home owners you probably feel there are some things you should learn before deciding to tackle the job yourself. This "painter's primer" should answer most of your questions.

Q. How can I tell how much paint I will need?

A. Most paints cover about 500 square feet per gallon. If the surface is unusually rough, dry or porous, figure on 20 per cent more paint. Narrow lap siding takes 100 per cent more paint than wide siding and corrugated metal surfaces take 33⅓ per cent more paint than smooth metal. The first coat on concrete block usually requires 50 per cent more paint.

Q. What type of paint thinner is best?

A. All paints are formulated according to exact specifications and all describe the proper thinner to use on the label of the can. Read the directions carefully and use only the exact quantity of thinner recommended.

—:—

Q. DOES THE color of paint vary from one can to another?

A. Often it does, so always try to finish at least one entire wall or panel from the same mixture. Where possible, start a new can of paint only at corners or intersections, never in the middle of a wall or ceiling.

Q. Is the agitation given the paint on the dealer's mechanical mixer enough to mix the paint thoroughly?

A. Only if the paint is used within a short period of time. The durability and color of paint depend on thorough and proper mixing, and the importance of it can't be overemphasized.

Q. What's the best way to mix paint?

A. First pour the liquid from the top of a newly-opened can into another container. Stir the remaining gummy matter until it becomes a smooth paste. Slowly replace the liquid, stirring continuously. Then pour the contents back and forth from one can to another several times. Stir the paint occasionally while you're using it.

Q. What if you're intermixing colors?

A. Always ascertain from your dealer that the colors you plan to mix are the same basic types of paint and can be mixed. Then mix it in quantities sufficient to cover an entire wall or panel without running out; the second batch may vary a fraction in hue. It's always best to overestimate the amount—the leftover paint can be used for touch-up if you label your various leftover cans carefully.

Q. HOW LARGE a brush should I use?

A. Select a good 3- or 4-inch brush for interior walls and ceilings; 2- or 2½-inch varnish brush for casings, doors and baseboards; and a 1 or 1½-inch sash brush for windows.

Q. What's the best way to clean a brush?

A. After you're through painting with oil paints or enamels, wipe the excess from the brush (use a putty knife to squegee it out) and clean it with turpentine, kerosene or mineral spirits. Then it can be washed with warm water and soap and stored dry. Brushes used in shellac or alcohol stain should be cleaned with alcohol; and brushes used in latex paint should be washed with warm soap and water.

Q. Does a new brush require any special preparation?

A. Yes. If you plan to use it for oil painting or enameling, you should soak the brush in linseed oil for as long as a week before using it. Drill a hole in the handle and suspend the brush on wire in the can of linseed oil. Never stand a brush on its bristles.

Q. Should I use a spray gun?

A. You can, and frequently it is the easiest way if you have a number of portable items to paint. Properly used, it will give a smooth, uniform result. Make sure you provide adequate ventilation.

Q. DOES THE paint need any special thinning?

A. A good household type spraying unit with a compressor capable of developing 30 to 40 pounds of pressure should atomize most paint as it comes from the can. Some of the heavier body paints require 10 to 15 per cent thinning.

Q. Should I use a brush or roller?

A. The roller leaves a pleasant, light-stippled effect which frequently covers small blemishes better than brushing. It is perhaps the easiest way to paint a ceiling.

Q. Are there different types of rollers?

A. Yes. The pan-type roller is the most widely used. There also is a magazine type roller in which the paint is stored inside the cylinder, and pressure type rollers in which the paint is forced through a hose into the inside of the roller.

Q. How about the cover?

A. When you buy the roller, be sure to get the right type cover. Use mohair (short nap) for oil paints, latex and rubber based paints, enamels and varnishes. Use wool (long nap) for rough stucco and concrete, fences and other surfaces where a heavier texture is required.

Q. Is there any trick to using a roller?

A. No; simply roll the paint on the surface with a light, even stroke. Start each new load of paint somewhat away from the already painted surface and roll toward the completed work. To avoid laps, roll the paint vertically, overlapping each stroke 50 per cent, and finish with light, vertical strokes.

Wrought Iron Will Add Sturdy And Delicate Note

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Indoors and out, wrought iron is a product that should be considered in your remodeling plans.

Decorative iron rails and trellises not only can be adapted to almost any period or style of home but often accent the design and furnishings.

Patterns range from crisp, straightline designs to ornate gingerbread varieties and are limited only by your own imagination and pocketbook — and frequently the two can be resolved into just the right touch for your modernization project.

Actually the term "wrought iron" is misleading. Ornamental iron men like Joseph Charla Jr., a 36-year-old graduate engineer who specializes in custom jobs, point out that "hot rolled mild steel" is the material now used in most work.

"WROUGHT IRON," technically, is a commercial iron containing very little carbon and usually fibrous. Economically it is not practical in normal house decorating.

But your dealer will understand what you mean by "wrought iron" — the common term for forged, shaped, twisted and hammered ornamental iron which is functional as well as decorative.

There are two broad categories of decorative iron: the type already described as "wrought iron," and a second variety known as "malleable cast iron."

There also is a third type called "plain cast", which is about 60 per cent cheaper but is brittle — subject to cracking from a sudden blow or temperature change—and not practical for most household uses.

The malleable iron can be cast into intricate designs and is used in trellis columns and grills to complement wrought iron railings and bannisters.

ADVANTAGES of decorative iron for railings or porch trellises are obvious.

BANNISTER of wrought iron is decorative.

In addition to its adaptability to design, it is virtually permanent, requires little upkeep and is strong without being bulky.

Price varies according to localities, and it always is advisable to get estimates from a number of local dealers. Another tip: usually you can get a better buy during the winter lull than in the rushed spring and summer periods, according to Charla.

If you plan to design the iron work yourself, there are some basic facts about the product you should know.

The standard rail consists of one-inch-square solid posts not more than seven or eight feet apart for the main support. Between them are half-inch posts about five inches apart. The top and bottom rails generally are channeled, and the top should be capped with a moulding.

From the basic structure you and your iron works dealer can get together and add the decorative touches for which your design calls.

If the railing or grillwork is for indoors you should consider polished brass accessories. Outdoors, such adornments often defeat the purpose of a rugged and maintainence free installation.

—:—

ALSO, YOU should avoid outdoor use of structural steel tubing (as opposed to solid iron) which is perfectly acceptable indoors. The tubing has essentially the same strength, but if rust develops tubing becomes weaker at the joint where it enters the masonry.

Unless you have the proper tools and know-how, installing ironwork yourself is not a good idea. If you care to try, however, here are some tips:

Posts should be sunk at least five inches deep into a hole 1½ inches in diameter in the concrete. Wedge it into position with steel shims, and seal it with a rich grout cement or some other cement-like composition.

All posts, scrolls and the like should be welded, and the bottom rail should be at least two inches off the ground so it can be painted easily.

Whether you install the ironwork yourself or have it done, at least you can handle the painting of it as an economic do-it-yourself project.

Outdoor installations should have a primer coat of red lead, zinc chromate or some other metal base paint to resist rusting, followed by at least two coats of good outdoor enamel.

Colors for indoor use are unlimited, but darker hues ordinarily means less frequent painting.

There's Proper Way To Use Your Attic Fan

If you are disappointed in your attic fan, the reason could be you're not using it correctly.

An attic fan should run all night, expelling the accumulated hot, stuffy daytime air and drawing in cool night air. If the fan is installed efficiently, there is a complete change of air throughout the house in the first minute.

In a two-story house, you should open the first floor windows first. Close them later, and open the second floor windows — perhaps when you go to bed.

Shut off the fan in the morning and close the windows to keep the cool evening air in the house as long as possible.

To avoid termites, keep all soil around your foundation from touching wood at any point.

Caulk House For Economy

By The Associated Press

Spring is a good time of the year to check your home to see that it is properly caulked to prevent water seepage and wintry chills.

It's easy for the average home handyman to repair small gaps and cracks with caulking compound — a semi-solid, plastic-like material made of a uniform mixture of pigments, oils and thinners.

The surface to be caulked must be thoroughly dry and free of dust, moisture and grease. There also must be sufficient space provided for installing the caulking compound.

Joints and gaps which are deeper than ⅝ inch should be filled with oakum before caulking. Caulking always should be done when the temperature is above 40 degrees.

There are three types of caulking compound: gun grade, knife grade and rope form. Gun grade is packaged in cartridges or plastic bags which fit a caulking gun. Each cartridge contains 1-10 of a gallon of compound. A rough estimation of the amount of gun caulking necessary for a job would be 10-15 linear feet per cartridge. The most common compound colors are white, natural, off-white and gray.

The second type of caulking compound, rope caulking, is available in several dimensions. It is recommended for use around windows, screens, louvres and other such areas. Rope caulking also is used on boats around hatches, windshields, cabins and masts — but specify marine caulking compound if you plan to use it on a boat.

No tools are necessary for application; unroll the caulking rope and press it into the crack with your fingers.

The third type of caulking, knife grade, is applied with a putty knife or spatula. This variety is particularly useful for medium-size cracks and crevices.

The best time to fix hard-to-open dresser drawers is in the cold, dry weather of winter. Sand the edges, and seal them with a coat of shellac to prevent swelling during summer humidity. A little wax smooths movement.

WARNING SYSTEM. Among the new safety devices for home swimming pools is a highly sensitive electronic system that sounds and alarm if an unattended youngster, like the 4-year-old pictured here, should fall into the water. A submerged sensing device (lower right) picks up the sound vibrations caused by the splash and relays a signal to an alarm panel (center) which can be located up to 100 feet from the pool.

Store Displays Books That Were Banned

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A book store displayed in its window volumes banned in one place or another through history. They included:

The Bible — banned many times from 553 (Italy) to 1926 (Russia).

Works of Shakespeare — "King Richard II" banned in England, 1597; "King Lear" banned in England, 1788; "Merchant of Venice", banned in the United States, 1931.

"Leaves of Grass" by Walt Whitman — banned in the United States, 1855.

"To Have and Have Not" by Ernest Hemingway — banned in Detroit, 1938.

"Don Quixote" by Cervantes — banned in Spain, 1640.

"An American Tragedy" by Theodore Dreiser — banned in Boston, 1930.

U.S. SLAM Planned

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Several companies have begun design studies for a nuclear-powered global range rocket called SLAM, capable of hitting targets anywhere in the world from mobile U. S. launching sites. SLAM, not expected to be ready for several years, would carry multiple hydrogen wareheads of supersonic speed. It would be able to maneuver in space to avoid enemy defense measures and could approach targets from several different altitudes and directions.

Window Wall Can Fit In Room Arrangement

If your living room has a window wall, you probably have difficulty arranging everything in the room around the other three walls.

If so, why not use the window wall, too.

You can make a long bookcase of highly finished plywood, low enough so it won't interfere with the view. Bolt the unit directly to the mullion posts which frame the window wall and finish the top with either a high gloss enamel, varnish or plastic.

The unit can hold anything you wish — books, phonograph and records; projector and reels of movie film, liquor or linens.

New dial-type light switches can dim or brighten the light in a room much like stage lighting control. Rheostat principles are incorporated in each light switch.

LEES LASTING STAR
the first and the best carpet made with DuPont 501 nylon

Lasting Star not only wears better, it looks better than run-of-the-mill nylon carpets for two very good reasons.

First, 501 nylon is the first ever engineered especially for carpet use, in one long, strong, continuous filament that never can fuzz up into little dirt traps or broken, matted ends.

Second, Lees gives this modern man-made fiber the same respectful care that's gone into every yard of carpet they ever made. Same number of painstaking inspections at every step of the way.

Every one of ... those heavenly carpets by Lees is registered by number for your protection.

That's why Lasting Star is not like other nylon carpets. Durable! Won't shed! Won't mat! Resists stains and scuffs! And so easy to care for, you can go wild on color—the lightest, the brightest, even white! Naturally Lasting Star is mothproof, mildew-proof and non-allergenic. Truly a remarkable carpet.

But aren't all nylon carpets alike?

Actually the term "wrought iron" is misleading. Ornamental iron men like Joseph Charla Jr., a 36-year-old graduate engineer who specializes in custom jobs, point out that "hot rolled mild steel" is the material now used in most work.

—:—

"WROUGHT IRON," technically, is a commercial iron containing very little carbon and usually fibrous. Economically it is not practical in normal house decorating.

But your dealer will understand what you mean by "wrought iron" — the common term for forged, shaped, twisted and hammered ornamental iron which is functional as well as decorative.

There are two broad categories of decorative iron: the type already described as "wrought iron," and a second variety known as "malleable cast iron."

There also is a third type called "plain cast", which is about 60 per cent cheaper but is brittle — subject to cracking from a sudden blow or temperature change—and not practical for most household uses.

The malleable iron can be cast into intricate designs and is used in trellis columns and grills to complement wrought iron railings and bannisters.

ADVANTAGES of decorative iron for railings or porch trellises are obvious.

BANNISTER of wrought iron is decorative.

In addition to its adaptability to design, it is virtually permanent, requires little upkeep and is strong without being bulky.

Price varies according to localities, and it always is advisable to get estimates from a number of local dealers. Another tip: usually you can get a better buy during the winter lull than in the rushed spring and summer periods, according to Charla.

If you plan to design the iron work yourself, there are some basic facts about the product you should know.

The standard rail consists of one-inch-square solid posts not more than seven or eight feet apart for the main support. Between them are half-inch posts about five inches apart. The top and bottom rails generally are channeled, and the top should be capped with a moulding.

From the basic structure you and your iron works dealer can get together and add the decorative touches for which your design calls.

If the railing or grillwork is for indoors you should consider polished brass accessories. Outdoors, such adornments often defeat the purpose of a rugged and maintainence free installation.

—:—

ALSO, YOU should avoid outdoor use of structural steel tubing (as opposed to solid iron) which is perfectly acceptable indoors. The tubing has essentially the same strength, but if rust develops tubing becomes weaker at the joint where it enters the masonry.

Unless you have the proper tools and know-how, installing ironwork yourself is not a good idea. If you care to try, however, here are some tips:

Posts should be sunk at least five inches deep into a hole 1½ inches in diameter in the concrete. Wedge it into position with steel shims, and seal it with a rich grout cement or some other cement-like composition.

All posts, scrolls and the like should be welded, and the bottom rail should be at least two inches off the ground so it can be painted easily.

Whether you install the ironwork yourself or have it done, at least you can handle the painting of it as an economic do-it-yourself project.

Outdoor installations should have a primer coat of red lead, zinc chromate or some other metal base paint to resist rusting, followed by at least two coats of good outdoor enamel.

Colors for indoor use are unlimited, but darker hues ordinarily means less frequent painting.

There's Proper Way To Use Your Attic Fan

If you are disappointed in your attic fan, the reason could be you're not using it correctly.

An attic fan should run all night, expelling the accumulated hot, stuffy daytime air and drawing in cool night air. If the fan is installed efficiently, there is a complete change of air throughout the house in the first minute.

In a two-story house, you should open the first floor windows first. Close them later, and open the second floor windows — perhaps when you go to bed.

Shut off the fan in the morning and close the windows to keep the cool evening air in the house as long as possible.

To avoid termites, keep all soil around your foundation from touching wood at any point.

Caulk House For Economy

By The Associated Press

Spring is a good time of the year to check your home to see that it is properly caulked to prevent water seepage and wintry chills.

It's easy for the average home handyman to repair small gaps and cracks with caulking compound — a semi-solid, plastic-like material made of a uniform mixture of pigments, oils and thinners.

The surface to be caulked must be thoroughly dry and free of dust, moisture and grease. There also must be sufficient space provided for installing the caulking compound.

Joints and gaps which are deeper than ⅝ inch should be filled with oakum before caulking. Caulking always should be done when the temperature is above 40 degrees.

There are three types of caulking compound: gun grade, knife grade and rope form. Gun grade is packaged in cartridges or plastic bags which fit a caulking gun. Each cartridge contains 1-10 of a gallon of compound. A rough estimation of the amount of gun caulking necessary for a job would be 10-15 linear feet per cartridge. The most common compound colors are white, natural, off-white and gray.

The second type of caulking compound, rope caulking, is available in several dimensions. It is recommended for use around windows, screens, louvres and other such areas. Rope caulking also is used on boats around hatches, windshields, cabins and masts — but specify marine caulking compound if you plan to use it on a boat.

No tools are necessary for application; unroll the caulking rope and press it into the crack with your fingers.

The third type of caulking, knife grade, is applied with a putty knife or spatula. This variety is particularly useful for medium-size cracks and crevices.

The best time to fix hard-to-open dresser drawers is in the cold, dry weather of winter. Sand the edges, and seal them with a coat of shellac to prevent swelling during summer humidity. A little wax smooths movement.

WARNING SYSTEM. Among the new safety devices for home swimming pools is a highly sensitive electronic system that sounds and alarm if an unattended youngster, like the 4-year-old pictured here, should fall into the water. A submerged sensing device (lower right) picks up the sound vibrations caused by the splash and relays a signal to an alarm panel (center) which can be located up to 100 feet from the pool.

Store Displays Books That Were Banned

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A book store displayed in its window volumes banned in one place or another through history. They included:

The Bible — banned many times from 553 (Italy) to 1926 (Russia).

Works of Shakespeare — "King Richard II" banned in England, 1597; "King Lear" banned in England, 1788; "Merchant of Venice", banned in the United States, 1931.

"Leaves of Grass" by Walt Whitman — banned in the United States, 1855.

"To Have and Have Not" by Ernest Hemingway — banned in Detroit, 1938.

"Don Quixote" by Cervantes — banned in Spain, 1640.

"An American Tragedy" by Theodore Dreiser — banned in Boston, 1930.

U.S. SLAM Planned

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Several companies have begun design studies for a nuclear-powered global range rocket called SLAM, capable of hitting targets anywhere in the world from mobile U. S. launching sites. SLAM, not expected to be ready for several years, would carry multiple hydrogen wareheads of supersonic speed. It would be able to maneuver in space to avoid enemy defense measures and could approach targets from several different altitudes and directions.

Window Wall Can Fit In Room Arrangement

If your living room has a window wall, you probably have difficulty arranging everything in the room around the other three walls.

If so, why not use the window wall, too.

You can make a long bookcase of highly finished plywood, low enough so it won't interfere with the view. Bolt the unit directly to the mullion posts which frame the window wall and finish the top with either a high gloss enamel, varnish or plastic.

The unit can hold anything you wish — books, phonograph and records; projector and reels of movie film, liquor or linens.

New dial-type light switches can dim or brighten the light in a room much like stage lighting control. Rheostat principles are incorporated in each light switch.

Animal Manures Help Grow Annuals

Any good garden soil will produce satisfactory annuals. They are quick-growing plants and require a fertile soil that does not dry out too rapidly and yet is well drained.

Unfortunately many of the plots where annuals are to be grown are made from the subsoil from excavating a cellar or, when they are next to a foundation, from all the left-over plaster, cement and debris covered with a few feet or inches of poor soil. It is a waste of time to try to grow good annuals on such plots.

When soil conditions such as described exist, it is necessary to remedy them by the addition of organic matter. Sometimes when the soil is a very heavy clay, sand should be added.

The best source of organic matter when an annual flower bed is desired for immediate use is one of various animal manures. Well-rotted stable or chicken manure and prepared sheep or cow manure are all very good. Other useful materials are cottonseed meal and bonemeal.

There should be as much cow manure, or even rotted horse manure, worked into the soil as can be done reasonably. Less chicken manure should be used, as it is several times as rich as cow or horse manure. Prepared cow and sheep manure can be used at the rate of 1 pound for 3 square feet and cottonseed meal and bonemeal at the rate of 1 pound for 5 square feet. All these materials should be thoroughly worked into the soil.

THE MANURES are especially beneficial in modifying soil texture; but when the soil is extremely poor to start with, it is usually necessary to add more readily available fertilizers also.

As a rule, a complete fertilizer such as a 4—8—4 or a 5—10—5 mixture is very satisfactory. It may be applied at the rate of about 1½ pounds to 100 square feet. It should be broadcast on the soil and throughly worked in just before planting.

When the location for annual flowers can be determined far in advance of planting, an ideal soil can be made by rotting sods of bluegrass in a rather heavy clay loam for a year and then mixing in equal quantities of rotted manure, leafmold, and sand. The manure and sod can be rotted together for a year if convenient.

A specially prepared soil of this kind probably will not be benefited much by another coat of manure the second year, but after that it should have annual dressings. Where good garden soil or other rich soil of suitable texture is available, probably the most common practice is to dig out a bed of suitable depth and fill it with this garden soil well enriched with rotted manure. For permanent beds careful preparation of good soil of proper texture is well worth the effort.

When larger areas are used for flowers, as in a special garden like a vegetable garden or part of one that can be handled with a plow, self-improvement crops such as crimson clover and vetch in winter or cowpeas in summer may be used to enrich the soil and thus prepare it for another season's crops.

It is possible sometimes to adapt some of these soil-improvement crops to the smaller areas of flower beds; but it is seldom advisable, as the limited quantity of fertilizing materials usually needed can ordinarily be provided.

Ornamental annual plants can be started readily from seed in the spring and will give blooms or satisfactory foliage effects the same season. Nearly all of these can be started in the open ground over at least a large part of the United States and will give the desired results before they are killed by frost.

In order to get a longer season of effect from the plants, many gardeners usually start all their plants under glass or start those for early plantings that way. In the more northern sections of the country some kinds must be started in this way so that the season will be long enough for them to mature. Others must be started under glass so that they will become established before the coming of dry or hot weather, which would be injurious to the young plants but would not affect established ones.

ALL THE KINDS of plants mentioned in this bulletin can be propagated from seed. Seeds of a few must be sown where the plants are to mature, as they will not stand being moved. Many may be sown where they are to grow, but most of them are helped by one or two transplantings.

Because better plants are obtained by transplanting, most annuals are sown in seedbeds and moved to their permanent places. Such seedbeds should be in well-prepared, mellow soil, preferably somewhat protected from drying winds.

If the soil is not mellow and moisture conditions are not exactly right, the seedlings, especially those from small seeds, will have trouble breaking through any crust that may form. Protection from wind also helps to maintain uniform moisture conditions. The timely use of a watering can is often a great help in promoting germination, but care should be taken not to use too much water. Seedbeds require frequent light waterings rather than the infrequent drenchings best suited to more mature plants.

Seeds may be sown either broadcast or in rows. Inexperienced gardeners should plant seeds in rows, especially slow-germinating seeds, as quick-starting weeds can be more readily recognized and removed with less danger of disturbing the germinating seeds. As a rule, the smaller the seed the shallower the depth of planting.

Very small seeds, such as petunia and snapdragon, are very lightly scratched into the soil with a coarse comb. They are sometimes covered with a very light grade of cheeselcoth to facilitate watering and afford some protection against their washing out of the soil. Such covering should be removed just as soon as the small seedlings are visible. Large seeds, such as nasturtium, China-aster, and sunflower, should be planted ½ to ¾ inch deep, at the shallower depth in heavy soils.

When early flowering of annuals is desired, it is necessary to start the seedlings in some type of protected plant structure such as a hotbed, a coldframe, or a greenhouse or in a flat in a sunny window.

Replacing Pane Termed Easy Job

By The Associated Press

It's safe to say that, sooner or later, every home owner will have to replace a pane of glass.

Sometimes it's a mystery how a window gets broken — but there is nothing mysterious about the process of installing a new pane.

The key is knowing how to use putty or glazing compound.

After removing the broken glass, clean away all the loose and crumbly putty and measure the dimensions. Your dealer probably has the correct size pane in stock, but if not he can cut one to fit.

Then comes the most important step. If you want the new putty to remain firm and free of cracks for the maximum time, apply a coat of good priming paint to the surface.

This applies to both wooden and metal sashes. Priming a wooden sash will keep the oil in the putty compound from soaking into the wood and leaving the putty to become dry and brittle.

Priming a metal sash with a quality steel primer will retard rust, which causes the putty to loosen its bond from the steel. Priming a metal sash also will provide a roughened surface which will make for good adhesion of the putty.

When the primer is dry, apply an even coat of putty or glazing compound on the inside of the sash and the moulding against which the glass pane will rest.

Then insert the glass and press lightly against the putty. This pressure will cause a continuous ribbon of putty to ooze up and around the glass.

Next, glazier's points must be inserted. These triangular metal pieces hold the pane in the sash. Finally, smooth the putty in place with a putty knife.

When the putty or glazing compound has been allowed to dry hard, it should be painted to seal and protect it.

The same number of paint coats should be applied to the putty as to the sash, and the paint should be lapped slightly over the glass to provide proper sealing at the critical edges.

Proper Care Gives Screen Longer Life

AP Newsfeatures

Spring is the best time to check your screens for traces of rust which could lead to serious damage later on.

Aluminum, brass and copper screens do not rust in the usual sense, but they are subject to corrosion. When it rains, corroded screening will cause an ugly downwash on the woodwork or masonry below the windows.

Special screen enamels are available which are thin, high-gloss coatings that do not clog the mesh. They give the wire a tough, rust-resistant finish and also can be used on the frames.

Before applying the screen enamel, clean the mesh thoroughly with a cloth saturated with turpentine or odorless paint thinner. Next, remove any rust with steel wool and prime bare spots with a metal primer.

When priming galvanized steel screening, use the metallic zinc paint called zinc dust-zinc oxide paint. If you wish, you can tint this metallic paint with oil color. Aluminum screens should be primed with zinc chromate.

If you wish to retain the original color of copper, brass or aluminum screening, you can protect them with a coat of clear spar varnish or exterior lacquer.

Worcestershire, tabasco or cayenne may be just what is needed to season meat gravy made from the drippings in the roasting pan. If you keep carmelized sugar syrup on hand it will add good flavor and rich brown color.

New Uses Set By Hardwood

AP Newsfeatures

Homeowners who are handy with woodworking tools are discovering new functional and decorative uses for an engineered wood product which a few years ago was consigned strictly to unseen structural functions.

The product is hardboard. Not until it took on its perforated "new look" did the versatility of hardboard become recognized.

The familiar brownish, screenback panel still is a favorite of the do-it-yourselfer. And now there are more than 50 other factory produced textures, colors and finishes. It usually fills the bill when you need a material that has no grain, is uniform in color, surface, thickness and size and is resistant to mars, dents and scratches.

New wood grained finish, plastic laminated, striated, embossed and other textured or light colored prefinished boards can be used to panel living room accent walls, or family and recreation rooms.

Applied with clips, adhesive or pre-colored nails, the panels go up quickly. The cost is less than some other kinds of wood paneling.

Many of the wood grained finish and other pre-finished hardboard wall panels need no further work, others require a clear sealer of a coat of lacquer or wax. Hardboard also takes paint easily.

Perhaps the most familiar use of hardboard in the home is the perforated board used for utility "hanging" walls with slip-in hooks for utensils and tools. The perforated board also can provide display walls in bedrooms and kitchens, and often is used for cabinet doors.

Backed by an insulation batt, the perforated panels can double as acoustical protection.

Built-in projects, shelves, cabinets and the like are where hardboard achieved its first real popularity with the do-it-yourselfer.

Tempered hardboard, treated to withstand effects of weather and moisture, can be used outdoors as fencing, gable facing and the like, and indoors where moisture resistance is required, as in basements or utility rooms.

A variety of hardboard siding products now on the market make possible clapboard, verticle plank, batten-board and other treatments. These can be used alone, combined with other sidings, or to set off brick and stone.

Quick color for the garden can be obtained in spring and early summer by purchasing potted plants in flower or about to flower.

Handy Pencils Repair Wall, Furniture Nicks

Repairing small tears in wall paper or scratches on furniture doesn't have to be an expensive or time-consuming job.

Try making repairs with a pencil.

There are lead pencils on the market in enough colors to match most any shade of wall paper. One company alone produces 72 colors, ranging from delicate pastels to hard blacks.

For those nicks in furniture, there are pencils to match mahogany, walnut and other popular wood finishes. Just apply the proper pencil, buff the spot with a cloth and the scratch disappears.

Other pencils that have proven handy about the house include:

All-weather pencils for use in marking things outside the house, such as garden stakes or screens. They contain a high percentage of wax, which melts into the wood under the sun's rays.

All-purpose pencils, also heavily waxed, which are ideal for marking smooth surfaces like glass or the cellophane covers of freezer packages. The wax enables the pencil to "grip" the smooth surface.

India Second Largest Film Producing Unit

NEW DELHI (AP) — India is the world's second largest film producing country, beaten only by the United States.

In 1959, India produced 402 full length films, 310 feature films, 112 documentaries and 52 newsreels.

These were shown in the country's 4,200 movie houses with an estimated 700 million attendance.

There are 63 film studios, mostly concentrated around Bombay, Madras and Calcutta. They employ more than 100,000 people.

Truck Driver Makes Error Of 600 Miles

CALUMET, Mich. (AP) — A trailer truck driver didn't learn until he stopped at state police headquarters here that the one-time mining community of Fulton, now a tiny village in Upper Michigan, was not his destination.

The driver, Transporting four tractors from Iowa, had passed Fulton, Mich., in the lower peninsula, because it wasn't listed in his map index.

The error took him 600 miles out of his way.

Aluminum Paint Will Protect Roof

AP Newsfeatures

Re-roofing your house possibly can be delayed for a number of years by a coat of one of the relatively new aluminum roof paints. Some manufacturers say their product will give full protection for five to eight years.

These paints also help insulate a home in summer. They reflect heat and can reduce under-roof temperatures by as much as 15 degrees.

Coatings come in a variety of pastel colors and are of two basic types. One is a combination of asphalt, oils and aluminum flakes; the other is based on alkyd resins.

The asphalt variety is made with or without asbestos fibers, which the alkyd type almost always contains. The asbestos adds greater body and toughness as well as insulation for heavy duty service.

These paints cannot be used on wood roofs — only on built-up composition or felt roofing, metal roofing, asbestos cement, tile, slate or asphalt shingles.

Be sure tne roof is dry and remove any debris, blistered paint or rust, and sweep the surface with a stiff broom.

On a flat roof, nail down all loose or blistered areas. Seal small breaks in the surface with roof cement. Seriously damaged areas as well as large cracks and holes should be patched with roofing felt, aluminum foil or similar substance and then secured with roofing cement.

You don't have to bother with small cracks, nail holes or other tiny breaks.

Apply the coating with a brush or squeegee. Under favorable conditions, the non-fibrated type can be sprayed on. Use a long handled brush to save bending over.

Oversize 'Furniture' Crashes Into Home

GRUNDY, Va. (AP) — Ed Pugh has a boulder in his bathroom. It is in his bedroom, too.

The boulder plunged down a mountain side and crashed through the roof between the bedroom and bathroom. No one was injured, but Pugh is wondering how to get it out. It's too big to go through the door.

Lt. Don Walsh, 29, is attending classes two nights a week at San Diego State College. He explained he considers it a field in which World War III already is being fought.

Walsh made a record ocean descent last July when he and Jacques Picard, Swiss scientist, went down a record 35,800 feet off Guam in the Navy's bathyscaph Trieste.

Earthworms are found in Australia, New Zealand and Burma that grow to a length of three feet.

Someone Preferred Music To Gun Sounds

WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP)—Someone apparently preferred the sound of music to gunfire.

L. A. Stallings loaned a rifle to an acquaintance and later saw it in a pawnshop. It had been traded for a guitar.

Sheriff's deputies advised him to see an attorney.

To avoid discoloration of your plumbing fixtures, drain your water heater periodically to remove dirt and rust. Most heaters can be cleaned simply by attaching the garden hose to the drain cock and letting the watter run until it is clear.

'Muscle' Taken Out Of Stone Walls

By The Associated Press

Building a stone wall is a do-it-yourself project that no longer requires a strong back and infinite patience.

Modern building stone is fabricated in lightweight, easy-to-handle shapes and in a variety of colors and textures. Even on a small plot a stone wall — either a standing wall on level ground or a retaining wall on a slope — can do much to enhance a home.

The only real decision of the home owner is whether to build a dry wall, which requires no mortar, or a wet wall, in which the stones are held together with a concrete mix.

One word of caution. If you plan a retaining wall higher than four feet, or if the slope of the hill is more than 36 degrees, or if it is to be built on filled or marshy soil, you should not attempt it without professional help.

MOST WALLS are approximately 18 inches thick. Determine the height, length and type of construction, and your local dealer can gauge how many stones you will need. He also will help you pick a type that will complement other construction on your property.

Now you're ready to build, and here's the step-by-step procedure:

Dig a trench six inches wider than the base of the wall to a depth of the frost level in your locality. If you want a stone foundation, fill the trench solidly with stone and mortar.

If you want a concrete foundation, use a mixture of one part cement to two parts sand to four parts of gravel and use seven gallons of water for each bag of cement. Dry wall construction also requires a solid foundation, and the first course of large stones should be mortared in place below ground level.

String guide lines of mason's twine the length of the wall and at various levels to keep the face of the wall flush. One guide line should be at the top of the wall to keep its height uniform.

Free standing walls are wider at the bottom than at the top, and retaining walls lean slightly inward toward the hill. Thus both have an angle between top and bottom which also must be uniform.

FOR FREE standing walls the degree of lean is one inch for every two feet of height; for wet retaining walls, one inch for every one foot of height; for dry retaining walls, two inches for every one foot of height.

To maintain uniformity of this angle, you should use batter boards. Do not rely on the guide lines alone.

Build batter boards by nailing two narrow boards or laths together at one end and spreading them apart at the other end, like a pair of scissors. Fasten them at the proper angle by holding one board against the face of the wall, the other should be perpendicular to the ground. Check it frequently with a mason's level.

For wet construction, all stones should be cleaned thoroughly before setting. Do not use a wire brush — it could cause rusting which might discolor the stones. Use a stiff scrub brush and water, and then allow the stones to dry.

In setting the stones, each should lie naturally as it would on the ground — not placed on end or in unnatural positions.

Larger stones should be laid in the lower courses. Overlap the vertical joints at every course, to insure proper bonding, and place some stones, called headers, at right angles to the face of the wall to strengthen the wall transversely. Set one header every 3 feet every third course. Save your flattest stones for the top course.

USE ENOUGH mortar to fill all the joints completely. Chink the voids between the stones inside the wall with chips of stones and fill with mortar.

The mortar mix should be one part cement to two parts sand to one-half part fireclay. Mix it thoroughly in a dry state, then add water until the mortar slips from a hoe cleanly. Be sure to use it within one hour.

As you finish one section, rake out the joints with a dull stick. The rake should be one half to three quarters of an inch deep. Brush off all excess mortar.

For retaining walls, provision must be made for water drainage. Remember, the wall is not a dam.

At the base of the wall on the hill side, install a continuous drain tile and fill with coarse gravel. For wet wall construction, add weep holes about every six feet.

Shrubbery planted on the hill above the wall will help check soil erosion. And to help carry off surface water, you should build a small diversion ditch about five feet up the hill.

Old Ordinance Aims At Fire 'Kibitzers'

CHIPLEY, Fla. (AP) — Kibitzers can get themselves doused offering advice at a fire in this northwest Florida town.

Mayer E. A. Tharp reports finding a 40-year-old ordinance which says:

"Any unauthorized person making any suggestion as to the operation of the Fire Department at any fire, thereby causing confusion to the department, if he shall refuse to discontinue same after being requested to do so, it shall be the duty of the officer in charge to order the water hose turned on him."

Identical Suits Worn Just By Coincidence

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — When Mrs. Terry Sanford, wife of the governor, and Mrs. Frances Philpott, wife of the lieutenant governor, met at their husbands' inaugural parade, they did a double take.

By coincidence, both women were wearing identical suits.

Hamberger Sold One Hamburger Too Many

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Otto Hamberger sold one hamburger too many.

A local food inspector ordered a hamburger at Hamberger's cafe, paid for it — and arrested Hamberger for operating a restaurant without a permit.

No Guest Room? You Just Haven't Looked Enough

The size of most homes doesn't permit the old-fashioned guest room, but modern couples can accommodate overnight guests as easily as their grandparents—in an up-to-date way.

Your guest space can be almost anywhere in the house, wherever you decide it fits in best with your way of life and will provide reasonable privacy and access to a closet and bathroom for your guests.

There are couches and day beds for family rooms which can be used as guest beds; living room sofas which camouflage double beds; chairs which convert into single beds.

Behind-a-door beds have gone modern, too. Now they fold into cabinets which appear as part of the hi-fi system in the music room; into room dividers between dining room and living room; into the base of bookcases in the library or den.

If you want a place that is for guests only, consider whether you have space that is going to waste.

Do you have a balcony that you could make into a sleeping porch? Is your garage high enough to permit construction of a second-story bedroom? Is there a corner of your attic or of your storage basement which you could convert into an extra bedroom?

If you decide on the latter, you can do it yourself without too much expense.

Put down an attractive floor covering and cover the walls and ceiling with wallboard to create the soft harmony so essential in a sleeping area. Paint bookshelves and a dresser to contribute color. A pair of folding screens form the other two walls which make your sleeping nook a cozy "guest room."

'Muscle' Taken Out Of Stone Walls

By The Associated Press

Building a stone wall is a do-it-yourself project that no longer requires a strong back and infinite patience.

Modern building stone is fabricated in lightweight, easy-to-handle shapes and in a variety of colors and textures. Even on a small plot a stone wall — either a standing wall on level ground or a retaining wall on a slope — can do much to enhance a home.

The only real decision of the home owner is whether to build a dry wall, which requires no mortar, or a wet wall, in which the stones are held together with a concrete mix.

One word of caution. If you plan a retaining wall higher than four feet, or if the slope of the hill is more than 36 degrees, or if it is to be built on filled or marshy soil, you should not attempt it without professional help.

MOST WALLS are approximately 18 inches thick. Determine the height, length and type of construction, and your local dealer can gauge how many stones you will need. He also will help you pick a type that will complement other construction on your property.

Now you're ready to build, and here's the step-by-step procedure:

Dig a trench six inches wider than the base of the wall to a depth of the frost level in your locality. If you want a stone foundation, fill the trench solidly with stone and mortar.

If you want a concrete foundation, use a mixture of one part cement to two parts sand to four parts of gravel and use seven gallons of water for each bag of cement. Dry wall construction also requires a solid foundation, and the first course of large stones should be mortared in place below ground level.

String guide lines of mason's twine the length of the wall and at various levels to keep the face of the wall flush. One guide line should be at the top of the wall to keep its height uniform.

Free standing walls are wider at the bottom than at the top, and retaining walls lean slightly inward toward the hill. Thus both have an angle between top and bottom which also must be uniform.

FOR FREE standing walls the degree of lean is one inch for every two feet of height; for wet retaining walls, one inch for every one foot of height; for dry retaining walls, two inches for every one foot of height.

To maintain uniformity of this angle, you should use batter boards. Do not rely on the guide lines alone.

Build batter boards by nailing two narrow boards or laths together at one end and spreading them apart at the other end, like a pair of scissors. Fasten them at the proper angle by holding one board against the face of the wall, the other should be perpendicular to the ground. Check it frequently with a mason's level.

For wet construction, all stones should be cleaned thoroughly before setting. Do not use a wire brush — it could cause rusting which might discolor the stones. Use a stiff scrub brush and water, and then allow the stones to dry.

In setting the stones, each should lie naturally as it would on the ground — not placed on end or in unnatural positions.

Larger stones should be laid in the lower courses. Overlap the vertical joints at every course, to insure proper bonding, and place some stones, called headers, at right angles to the face of the wall to strengthen the wall transversely. Set one header every 3 feet every third course. Save your flattest stones for the top course.

USE ENOUGH mortar to fill all the joints completely. Chink the voids between the stones inside the wall with chips of stones and fill with mortar.

The mortar mix should be one part cement to two parts sand to one-half part fireclay. Mix it thoroughly in a dry state, then add water until the mortar slips from a hoe cleanly. Be sure to use it within one hour.

As you finish one section, rake out the joints with a dull stick. The rake should be one half to three quarters of an inch deep. Brush off all excess mortar.

For retaining walls, provision must be made for water drainage. Remember, the wall is not a dam.

At the base of the wall on the hill side, install a continuous drain tile and fill with coarse gravel. For wet wall construction, add weep holes about every six feet.

Shrubbery planted on the hill above the wall will help check soil erosion. And to help carry off surface water, you should build a small diversion ditch about five feet up the hill.

Old Ordinance Aims At Fire 'Kibitzers'

CHIPLEY, Fla. (AP) — Kibitzers can get themselves doused offering advice at a fire in this northwest Florida town.

Mayer E. A. Tharp reports finding a 40-year-old ordinance which says:

"Any unauthorized person making any suggestion as to the operation of the Fire Department at any fire, thereby causing confusion to the department, if he shall refuse to discontinue same after being requested to do so, it shall be the duty of the officer in charge to order the water hose turned on him."

Identical Suits Worn Just By Coincidence

RALEIGH, N. C. (AP) — When Mrs. Terry Sanford, wife of the governor, and Mrs. Frances Philpott, wife of the lieutenant governor, met at their husbands' inaugural parade, they did a double take.

By coincidence, both women were wearing identical suits.

Hamberger Sold One Hamburger Too Many

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Otto Hamberger sold one hamburger too many.

A local food inspector ordered a hamburger at Hamberger's cafe, paid for it — and arrested Hamberger for operating a restaurant without a permit.

No Guest Room? You Just Haven't Looked Enough

The size of most homes doesn't permit the old-fashioned guest room, but modern couples can accommodate overnight guests as easily as their grandparents—in an up-to-date way.

Your guest space can be almost anywhere in the house, wherever you decide it fits in best with your way of life and will provide reasonable privacy and access to a closet and bathroom for your guests.

There are couches and day beds for family rooms which can be used as guest beds; living room sofas which camouflage double beds; chairs which convert into single beds.

Behind-a-door beds have gone modern, too. Now they fold into cabinets which appear as part of the hi-fi system in the music room; into room dividers between dining room and living room; into the base of bookcases in the library or den.

If you want a place that is for guests only, consider whether you have space that is going to waste.

Do you have a balcony that you could make into a sleeping porch? Is your garage high enough to permit construction of a second-story bedroom? Is there a corner of your attic or of your storage basement which you could convert into an extra bedroom?

If you decide on the latter, you can do it yourself without too much expense.

Put down an attractive floor covering and cover the walls and ceiling with wallboard to create the soft harmony so essential in a sleeping area. Paint bookshelves and a dresser to contribute color. A pair of folding screens form the other two walls which make your sleeping nook a cozy "guest room."

Tips For Buying A 'New' Old House

By DAVID L. BOWEN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Most people approach the purchase of any kind of house with a great deal of caution.

The average person buys a home only once or twice during his entire life, and usually it is the largest single investment he ever makes.

With upwards of $15,000 being committed, it's no wonder the average family takes the plunge with vague feelings of anxiety.

This insecurity is diminished for the fortunates buying a new home —in the same way a new car buyer has less to worry about than the fellow taking his chances in the used car market.

But everyone can't buy a new home.

With construction costs spiraling, a middle income family with four or more children frequently is unable to afford a custom-built home and has trouble finding a house large enough in builder developments.

These tract homes are designed for the mass market and most have only three bedrooms.

WITH SLIM pickings among new houses, the big family usually must search for shelter in old neighborhoods. Here the prices decline (sometimes) but the hazards, real and imagined, increase.

The most reassuring thing to remember about buying an old home is that there is a remedy for every defect in a structure – all the way up to razing the old frame and building a new home on the foundation.

In examining a prospective purchase, what you are trying to determine is exactly how many defects you will have to correct and how much this will cost.

If the buying price is adjusted to take care of the necessary repairs, you may get a bargain even if several thousand dollars worth of repair work must be done.

What you must guard against is the possibility some of these repair bills come as a surprise. It's the unexpected expenses which turn the apparent bargain into a white elephant.

For most people, the only reasonable protection on this score is professional advice.

Do not make your final decision without an inspection by some competent person with no stake in the sale. In many areas, engineering inspections are routinely performed for a fee in the $50 range. If there's no company in your city doing this work, find a contractor willing to do it.

Here are some guidelines which a prominent New York architect, Herman H. York, suggests for your own inspection and that of the professional you hire:

The House

Look for dampness and termites.

Look for large open or patched up cracks. Fine plaster cracks, incidentally, are the result of normal settling and are not important.

Look for sagging floors or girders.

Check the electrical system. Anything today with less than 100 amp. service is not sufficient.

Check force of water in faucets. A good pressure indicates pipes which have not corroded.

The Plot

How close is the house to property lines? If an empty lot is next door, can somebody build a house closer than you would like to have it?

Does the property drain well? Are there sewers? If not, does the private sewage system work properly? Are there any peculiar odors around the house sewer indicating possible difficulty?

Do the rain water downspouts drain properly?

What is the condition of the concrete or masonry walks and driveways?

Do any trees need attention? Tree work or removal is expensive.

The Neighborhood

Ride around in your car in a wide area at various times of the day to check traffic, kind of neighbors, amount of noise, railroad noises, airport noises.

Check on schools, not only where they are but whether they are of high standards.

Determine whether the neighborhood is on the up or downgrade. In most old areas, the chances are it is going downward, but how fast?

Watch out for industrial or commercial encroachment near your house. Can somebody build a gas station or a supermarket across the street? Check zoning.

Other Tips

Never offer the seller what he asks for the house. The asking price always is higher than the selling, particularly if your are dealing directly with the owner.

Also, it is most important to agree with the seller as to exactly what is included in the sale. Get this put down in writing at the first conference. Often when a seller knows you are interested, he changes his mind about including some of the things he first offered.

Carpeting is such an item, laundry equipment, garden tools, television aerial, screens, and similar things are all items which he can remove before you move in. Come to a firm understanding regarding all of these items.

One final point architect York emphasizes: Do not select a house which is in a neighborhood populated by people who are considerably above your economic level.

Regardless of whether you can put a large amount of cash into the house — thus making it easy to meet the monthly payments — keeping up with those around you can be expensive.

Your house has become a status symbol. Stay within your means.

Helpful Hints For Amateur Housepainter

Here are some tips that might make your housepainting job easier.

Always begin with the upper trim —at the peak of the highest gable. Do all the ladder work first, rather than working high and then low.

When painting siding, daub the paint on in generous, flat spots, then use long leveling strokes to spread it smoothly. The first coat will require more brushing than the following coats.

Paint the outside of gutters with house paint, but apply a good grade metal paint to the inside. It will add life to the gutters.

Windows are a particular problem for most amateurs. Use an angular sash brush. On double-hung windows, lower the outside sash and raise the inside sash, then paint the exposed inside check rail.

Next paint the cross-bars and frame, then the casings and sill. Finally paint under the sill. Open and close the window several times daily from the inside until the paint has dried to keep it free.

On casement windows that face out when open, paint the top and bottom edges, then the sash, stiles, rails, frames and casings.

On porch floors, railings and steps use only porch enamel or floor paint. These finishes are designed to withstand rough wear, scrubbing and destructive weather.

Blind Teacher Coaches And Heads Visual Unit

KETTERING, Ohio (AP) — Although he lost his sight in 1956 and can distinguish only shapes and dark and light, David Rayburn teaches biology at Fairmont High School, coaches the golf team — and heads the visual education department.

Student assistants help Rayburn with much of his work and friends record his books and lab manuals on tape. His golf team has lost only three matches in five years.

Hitting Where It Hurts

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — An enterprising state legislator has had enough of the law's delay. He proposes stern action for judges whose cases drag longer than 120 days: a salary cut.

Personal Oversight Admitted By Columnist

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Columnist R. G. Miller, who writes about Oklahoma's scenic spots, admits he had a red face recently.

He received a letter asking where "Recognition Monument and Park" were located. Not recalling it, he called on the public to furnish the answer.

The word came quickly: It is a southeastern Oklahoma monument to men who have boosted that scenic region.

And, one of the men honored is R. G. Miller.

Passed Boy Stage

MT. PULASKI, Ill. (AP) — Newsboys here have passed the boy stage. Jess Stuart, 70, gave up his delivery route to Perry Kepner, who is 62.

Jane Doe Or John Doe, All Same To The Judge

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Eva Roddy, 44, protested when she was haled into city court on a charge of possessing whisky.

"That's a John Doe warrant and I'm a Jane Doe," she told Judge Charles Kelly.

The judge said the search warrant's sex didn't matter and fined Mrs. Roddy $50.

A Hungry Thief

KIRKWOOD, Mo. (AP) — The Arthur P. Skinners came home one night recently to find their house stripped of $1,972 worth of belongings, ranging from three frozen ducks to two fur coats. The thief also made off with silverware, clothing, jewelry, two frozen chickens and five frozen steaks.

Home Should Change With Needs

By The Associated Press

Do you adjust your living to suit your house?

As basic family needs change, your house should change to accommodate them. The alternative is changing your pattern of living to put up with the deficiencies. And this isn't a happy thought. If there is any place you should feel perfectly content with the shape of things, it is in your own home.

The ideal house is one that is up to date with family and sociological changes, is safe and healthy, with adequate and well organized space, plus beauty and graciousness.

If yours doesn't pass the test, the answer frequently is not a new house but a modernizing program.

As with buying a new home, modernizing an old one should be done only after a careful analysis of exactly what your needs are. And you actually have a better idea of this, after living in a house for some time, than the family who has just bought a home to remodel.

YOU CAN trace every movement of every member of your family from breakfast to bedtime, and list every inconvenience encountered over a long period — every example of adjusting your living to suit your house.

Armed with such a list, and possibly with the help of a specialist, the major problems frequently can be solved with one program.

There also is the problem of keeping up with society. A generation ago, for example, there was no need to include in house plans a provision for comfortable television watching, or a laundry room with space and electrical facilities for a washer, dryer and ironer. And mother's kitchen had no place for a dishwasher, a wall oven or a built in range.

If your house was built a generation ago, these are some of the things the builder could not forsee —but which you probably could provide for now, and without too much difficulty.

Your remodeling program may call for alteration rather than enlarging the house by adding a room or wing.

This is more of a problem, because it first involves tearing down, then building up. Inconvenient though it is to your daily routine, however, it usually requires only carpentry and not the service of an architect.

BEAR IN MIND, whether you're altering or enlarging, that most communities have building codes that must be adhered to. So the first step is to take your plan to the proper officials and have it approved.

The next step, unless you plan to do the work yourself (and be careful if it involves structural changes), is to get estimates of the cost from several builders. This not only assures you of the best deal economically, but frequently builders have suggestions that improve your own ideas.

If you can't afford to do the entire remodeling program all at once, you should make the most urgent changes first, and always in light of future plans.

Otherwise you might find yourself at some later date tearing down part of a wall you just built to install electrical facilities or pipes for the room on the other side — the one you couldn't afford to renovate earlier.

The final step is to arrange for financing your improvements, and there are several methods to consider.

There is the standard method, through your banker or a lending institution. The amount you may borrow depends on your reputation with the institution and your ability to repay the loan. The lender assumes the risk.

ANOTHER method is through the Title I plan of the National Housing Act. This is a loan insured by the federal government which must be repaid within three years. There is no down payment required, and the maximum loan is $2,500.

Suppose for example, you wanted to borrow $2,000. Your interest would be $299.58 and your monthly payment $63.88. If you wanted to repay it in two years instead of three, the interest would be $202.42 and the monthly payment $91.77.

A third method is through an "open end" mortgage, which is not allowed in some states. This permits you to borrow on the basis of your improvement up to the original amount of your mortgage. You repay it over the same period as your mortgage.

For example, if your mortgage has 10 years to run you pay back the money in monthly payments over that time at the same interest rate of your original mortgage agreement.

If this is not allowed in your state, you possibly could renegotiate your regular mortgage, which would have the same effect.

There probably is no house standing which couldn't be improved. Every family has different ideas, different needs, different tastes. A richer home life depends on making your house suit your way of living—not adjusting your life to your home's deficiencies.

FOR A BEAUTIFUL PATIO, landscaping is all-important. At least a small spot of shade is suggested by the American Association of Nurserymen. Depending on what use the patio is planned for, you many want to plant shrubs on one or more sides for privacy, flowers for color, evergreens for year-round greenery and perhaps a few potted plants.

Old Furniture Can Be Given A 'New Look'

You can give old furniture an elegant look by antiquing.

The idea is to simulate natural wear and age. And the process is simple for the average home handyman—or handy gal, for that matter.

The "antique" finish goes right on top of the present enamel or varnish. For this reason the process often is called glazing.

The transparent glaze coat highlights carving and moulding and also tones down over-decorated surfaces. And the nice part about it is that if you don't get the color or effect you want on the first try, you can wipe the glaze off with turpentine and try again.

Raw umber is a popular glaze color. It gives white enamelled furniture the look of ivory; over blue it produces a blue-green coloring; and used over red it gives a brick red finish.

Burnt umber is another popular oil choice. It produces a darker effect than the raw umber. Raw sienna or yellow ochre can be used to provide a golden tone. If you have doubts about the best glaze color for the effect you wish to achieve, ask your paint dealer.

Antique glaze is made by combining 3 tablespoons of turpentine with 1½ teaspoons of the oil color and mixing thoroughly. Then blend in one tablespoon of clear quality varnish.

A brush or spray can be used for applying the glaze, either to the entire area at once or in sections, depending on the size of the piece.

Let the glaze rest for one or two minutes. Then, using a clean, lint-free cloth, wipe it in circular motions. When working on a flat surface, begin wiping at the center and work outward to the edges.

When the glaze has been wiped, stipple the surface with a small dry brush. This softens the edges of the glaze and highlights the color.

You Can Give Old Fireplace A New Look

Almost everyone loves a fireplace — and nearly everyone can have one.

New fireplaces can be added to your home or existing fireplaces can be modernized for beauty and operating efficiency.

There are many remodeling possibilities. Remove the ornate mantle and its collecting of bric-a-brac, for example, and build shelves and cabinets flush with your projecting fireplace.

Or take out the lower side walls of the projecting fireplace and give it a really new look by making the fire visible and warming on three sides.

If you have a fireplace in the wall of one room, why not open it up into the room behind as well? A livingroom fireplace can add greatly to the coziness of a bedroom or dining room.

You can create a modern, open feeling using your fireplace without changing it at all. Remove the wall on each side of the fireplace and leave it standing as a divider between living room and dining room.

You can install a fireplace in any wall where the new chimney projection will not conflict with structural elements above. Factory-built chimney assemblies facilitate such projects.

It is even possible, using a lightweight prefabricated chimney supported from above, to have a fireplace in the center of a room. Attach a copper hood to the lower end of the chimney and an attractive and efficient design results.

You can install a fireplace as a room divider, bringing friendliness to two areas. The fireplace floor itself is made of firebrick, surrounded by flagstone.

Easiest way to set flagstone in an existing wood floor is to remove the finish flooring and pour concrete deafening between the joists — the same way bathroom floors are prepared for tile. The flagstone can then be set in mortar over the concrete.

How about a fireplace in the kitchen? It could be brick with rotating spit, or tile for the charm of Pennsylvania Dutch.

Or you can install your new fireplace in an outside wall, with a barbecue outside, for casual indoor-outdoor living.

Rural vs. City Living Can Split Personality

By LYDIA BICKFORD
AP Newsfeatures Writer

I'm a split personality. One of me revels in country living, thrills to the sight of a doe bringing her two fawns to the apple tree for a mid-morning snack and glories in the fact that a zestful rendition of "Home on the Range" on the accordion won't disturb the neighbors. They're too far away to hear or care.

On the other hand, my citified personality craves to wade in culture, free or pay, to shop for the necessities of the life without going three minutes from the city apartment and to be an anonymous soul, happily lost among the millions of New Yorkers.

This tug of war has been going on for years, with neither personality winning or even yielding the least bit. It probably will go on till the end — unless unexpected riches make it possible for me to eat my cake and have it too. Few people can.

DIVIDENDS accrue in either location.

For an animal-mad individual like me, both the wild and tame variety are available in the country. The great dane chases rabbits and confounds woodchucks; the raccoon moves into the shed, with some time out for spashing in the nearby brook, and the bird life would thrill an Audubon expert.

An easy-does-it attitude toward children is possible in the country. A pan of peepers spent a happy night on the dining table, covered with a piece of screen, while son studied their vocal cords.

An authentic snake pit housed an interesting collection of specimens for a budding herpethologist to investigate — till one proved to be an unhappy water snake trapped in a waterless ditch.

The shotgun goes into use keeping the crow population under control. The rifle blasts at a target, safely set into the hill. The fisherman in the family (who, in the best tradition, caught his first trout on a bent safety pin) can follow the water route for miles in search of a catch.

You see and enjoy the people you really like in the country. There are no casual callers; you have to drive to get anywhere, so you phone before appearing. Real friends are invited to Saturday night supper, and are quite likely to stretch the visit to a weekend stay.

YOU CAN wear what you like in the country. Ski pants, a venerable leather jacket, a knit cap are ideal for the wintry days. If the pants are patched, so much the better. In the summer, there are some who live in their bathing suits, or at the most wear shorts and go barefoot all summer long. No one cares.

But I long for the city when I consider my motorized plight. I am two miles from the nearest newspaper, farther than that from the nearest food store; and every dance, Scout meeting, singing lesson, bowling outing, slumber party, and school play calls for a sizeable drive.

In the city, the subway is on the corner, the bus a block away. And if you prefer to walk, there are sidewalks. Teen-agers do not have to be taken places. They ride the common carriers.

The bottle of ink, the head of lettuce, the paperback book and the clothespins aren't even a stone's throw away. If your burdens are too great to be borne, a helpful boy in a bicycle-propelled cart will bring them to you five minutes later. The drugstore is happy to send a boy over with a bottle of aspirin. And if you don't mind paying outrageously for it, a wood boy will lug in four logs for your city fireplace.

A CITY is athrob with endless activities. In a given day you can hear a lecturer describe the Flemish school of painting; go to a chamber music concert, and slip in to a United Nations meeting, all for free.

You can admire the crafts of many lands by browsing through foreign shops and display centers of many nations — all for free.

I've still to penetrate to the top floor of the museum; the branch library around the corner offers more activities than I could cope with. And the list of lecturers, tops in their fields, is endless.

And when you splurge on a play, you can get a decent night's sleep, and rise well after the sun.

I want to live in the peace of the country, with a subway stop where my mailbox is perched. I want the excitement and stimulus of the city, and still be able to see the Big Dipper in the sky at night.

I guess I want the unattainable.

Pardon Waiting

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Lewis Bennett, ordered freed from prison after another man confessed to the crime, kept waiting for his pardon from the governor. And, the governor kept waiting for him to pick it up. It took a news story to bring them together.

Preparation Vital Part Of Painting

Repainting often is the key to an entire remodeling program, so it pays to do the job correctly.

Actual application of the paint, however, is only part of the job. Equally important, if you want the new paint to last, is proper preparation of the surface to be painted.

The interior of a house offers a variety of surfaces, and many of them require special preparation. Here are the major ones, with advice to the do-it-yourselfer on how to prepare them properly.

Plaster: Bare plaster should be dry before it is painted. Patch all the cracks with spackling compound, then sand and spot prime the surface. Generally all new plasters are extremely alkaline and require a neutralizing bath of two to three pounds of zinc sulphate crystals dissolved in a gallon of water. Allow it to dry, then dust it off. Don't give this treatment, however, if you plan to use latex paint.

Previously painted plaster should be patched, sanded and dusted, and all nicks and cracks spot primed.

Previously applied water - thinned paints that will dissolve under new applications of water-thinned paints must be removed or sealed off with oil - type primers. Glossy finishes should be dulled by washing with a milk solution of sal soda, sodium silicate, ready-mixed surface conditioners, sandpaper or steel wool.

WOOD: If you are going to paint bare wood, simply make sure it is clean and dry. Sandpaper it to smooth the finish, fill all nail holes and cracks with spackling compound, then sand it smooth when dry. Seal all knots with shellac to prevent them from bleeding through the paint, and prime the rest of the surface with enamel undercoater reduced as recommended on the label of the paint.

Previously painted wood needs only cleaning if the surface is in good condition. Glossy surfaces should be dulled the same way as described for previously painted plaster.

If the surface is not clean and smooth, the old paint should be removed. Apply the paint remover generously, allow it to work, then skin off the paint with a putty knife. Sand it thoroughly, and proceed as you would with bare wood.

—:—

METAL: Remove all loose dirt, paint, rust and scale with a wire brush, sandpaper, steel wool or a scraper, whichever gets the job done better on the particular surface. Then remove grease and oil by washing with mineral spirits, kerosene, turpentine or any other suitable cleaning solution.

Prime new metal, and spot prime previously painted metal where necessary. If you plan to use latex paint on bare metal, first prime it with an oil-type primer.

WALLBOARD: Apply a wash coat of primer — usually the paint itself reduced about 10 per cent. Allow it to dry, then cover it with the finish coat applied either with a brush or roller.

MASONRY BLOCKS: Allow new blocks to dry six months before painting, or else neutralize them with a wash coat of three to four pounds of zinc sulphate to a gallon of water. Allow it to dry, then clean the blocks with a stiff brush. Don't give this treatment if you plan to use latex paint, however.

WALLPAPER: If you are going to use latex or water based paint, try it out first on an inconspicuous portion of the wall. If the paper contains any water-soluble inks or dyes, they will bleed through. If they do, seal the paper with a thin coat of shellac or else remove it entirely.

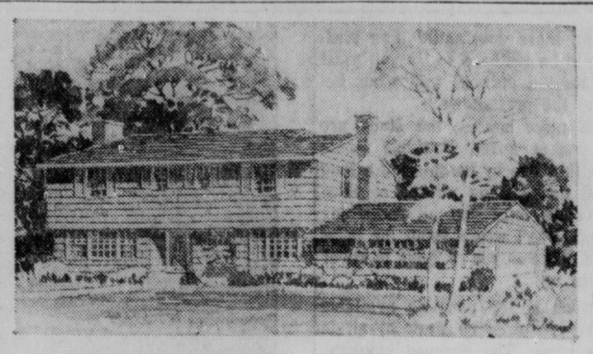
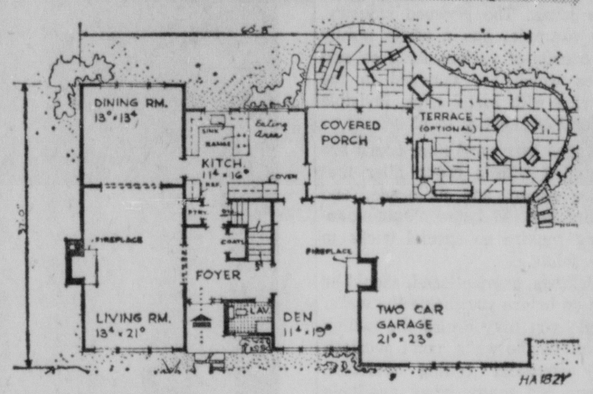
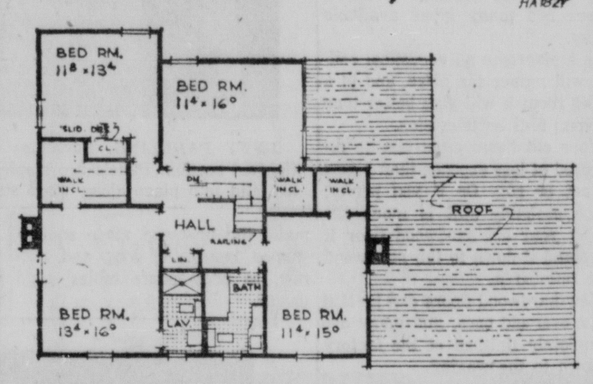
BRICK: Latex paints can be applied directly to bricks after first cleaning them and allowing them to dry. It may take two or more coats to cover them thoroughly. Oil paints or enamels should be used after an oil paint primer.

Here are a few tips that should make the job easier:

An old piano stool with a two-foot square platform fastened to the seat makes an excellent turntable to work on while finishing many portable items. If you don't have one, any stool will do, and it's practically a must for painting a chair.







STYLISH TWO. The center hall is the dominating feature of this large two-story home. Four upstairs bedrooms are grouped around a center hall while the living areas down-stairs adjoin the entrance foyer. Other features: Wood burning fireplaces in the living room and the den; a large kitchen with adjoining eating area; and an open terrace in the rear. The architect is Herman York, 90-04 161st St. Jamaica 32, N. Y. and the plan is HA182Y.

Richmond, Norfolk Real Tale Of 2 Cities

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Daylight saving time always brings problems to those who live along the borders of the changing time zones, but the problems of Richmond and Norfolk are a real tale of two cities.

It takes a legislative act for a Virginia area to observe a time other than standard. Such an act is on the books, applying only to cities between 200,000 and 225,000 population.

It applied only to Norfolk at the time it was passed. Now Norfolk has advanced to 305,000 in the 1960 census, and Richmond has dropped from 230,000 to 219,000, making the act apply to only Richmond.

Richmond's city council has voted for daylight time. Norfolk city fathers are scratching their heads.

Here's One Scientist Who Breeds Disease

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — A geneticist at the University of Connecticut is one of two scientists in the country engaged in a singular project — breeding chickens with muscular dystrophy.

Each year some two dozen of his chickens are sent to research laboratories around the country where scientists can study the wasting away of animal tissue and muscle.

The dystrophic chickens are bred, the geneticist says, by crossing two carriers possessing the muscular dystrophy gene. One-quarter of the offspring will contract the disease, he reports.

Authorized Escape

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — No alarm was sounded when 25 men climbed out a window of the combination Police Headquarters-City Prison. They were policemen, who had assembled in the roll call room before going off duty, when a new lock on the door stuck.

New Product Will Do Trick In Driveway

By The Associated Press

Resurfacing your own blacktop driveway may sound like a big assignment for the ordinary homeowner, but a new product makes this a do-it-yourself task.

The new coating, a liquid, does not require preheating and the only tool needed is a push-broom.

According to its developer, the Allied Chemical Corp., the new product is waterproof and flexible. It is made from a base of coal-tar pitch.

If you care to try it, here's the step-by-step procedure recommended by the manufacturer:

1.—Dig out all soft or oil-soaked spots on the blacktop surface. Clean all dirt and loose material from holes and cracks. Low spots which are to be elevated to the level of the rest of the driveway should be dug out to a depth of at least one-inch.

2.—All holes and cracks should be filled with a ready prepared blacktop patching compound. These patches can be tamped firmly in place.

3.—Hose off the entire area and apply the coating to the still damp surface. Apply two thin coathings, allowing the first coat to dry before the other is applied.

A two - coat application requires about two gallons per 100 square feet.

Streetcleaning Device Makes Effort Useless

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — In a move to determine how parking meters can be used most efficiently, Topeka traffic officers started marking the tires of parked cars.

But their efforts went for naught.

A few minutes later street-cleaning machines spouting water followed behind the officers, washing away most of the tire marks.

Recruiting Marines Not So Easy After All

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP) — Sgt. Charles Blasi, Marine recruiter, almost had decided the recruiting business was getting pretty easy.

An 18-year-old lad walked into the Marine recruiting station, adjacent to the selective service office, and announced:

"I want to sign up."

"Don't you want me to explain anything about the Marines to you first," Blasi inquired.

"No, I just want to sign up," the youth said.

Blasi told the youngster he would have to take a test. The youth looked a bit skeptical, then sat down and took the examination. He passed it.

"It's the first time I ever knew you had to pass a test to sign up for the draft," the boy said.

Blasi sadly tore up the examination paper and directed the youth to the nearby selective service office.

Shovels Disappeared But Not The Snow

MASSILLON, Ohio (AP) — When the Recreation Department's snow - clearing tractor developed mechanical trouble, officials provided shovels for ice skaters wishing to help clear Sippo Reservoir.

Instead of the snow disappearing, the shovels have vanished, says skating supervisor Ralph Huppert.

Ceiling, Walls, Floor Figure In Renovation

By The Associated Press

Walls, ceilings and floors should be the first concern of home owners contemplating a remodeling program.

Or rather, ceilings, walls and floors — because that's the order the do-it-yourself renovating should take.

Like the backdrop on a stage, your walls, ceilings and floors can enhance your furnishings to the point where everything in the room appears almost new again.

And no longer does modernizing your walls mean hiring professional plasterers to do the job. With many of the materials on the market today, putting in a new wall, ceiling or floor can be handled by the average home handyman.

Dry wall construction—plywood, cement board, hardboard, fiber board, gypsum board and other materials applied in a dry process — characterizes most new homes today.

There also are alternatives — brick, marble, structural glass, stone and tile, to name a few, but many of these tend to get out of the realm of most do-it-yourselfers.

Not so with the various dry wallboards. They can be put right on top of old plaster walls in a fast, clean operation.

Both ceiling and walls must be furred out and leveled off. This means you must nail strips of wood, usually 3/4-inch thick, vertically on the walls and across the ceiling to provide a solid base to nail the new panels to.

The strips also require something more substantial than plaster to be fastened to, so you must locate the vertical wall studs behind the present wall.

In most houses, the studs are 16 inches apart. You can locate the first one by hammering a long nail through the plaster at short intervals until you hit something solid. Don't worry about the holes you make — you're going to cover them up.

Much of the paneling available today requires no work at all in the joints. The plywood industry, for example, has a whole family of boards of various textures and hues which are fastened to the furring with metal clips, invisible after the panel is in place.

Paper board and fiber board are installed with a crack filler that hides seams and nailheads, and many beveled types of pine paneling require no special tricks in the joints.

Ceilings, as mentioned, should be put up before you tackle the walls. While you may desire the ceiling to match the walls, don't overlook an acoustical ceiling material. There are many types available today.

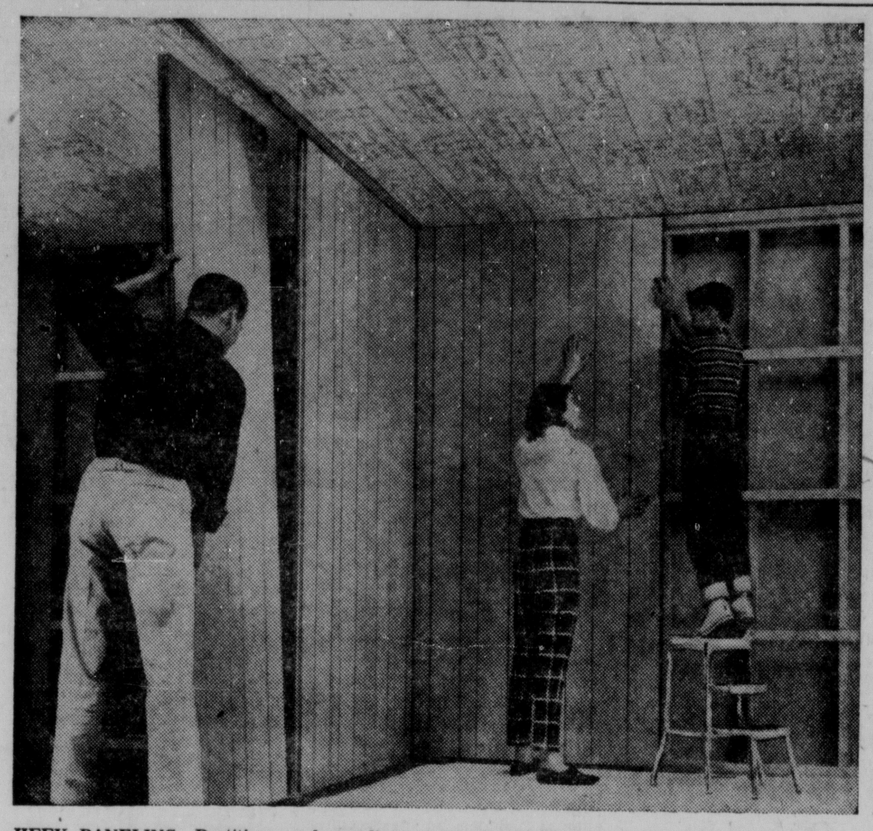
In a playroom an acoustical ceiling will reduce the noise, and in a living room it will give better tone to your hi-fi or television.

Your old floors often can be recovered at less expense than a new carpet or rug. Or if you prefer, there probably still is much life left in your old hardwood floor if you sand it down to the new wood and refinish it.

New hardwood floors can be laid right over old ones, and many are completely finished at the factory —down to the waxing.

Cork, asphalt, clay, rubber and other composition tiles also can be laid right on top of existing floors, and most of these likewise are not too difficult for a do-it-yourselfer.

Investigate the various new types of wall, ceiling and floor coverings thoroughly. Chances are there is one to suit you — and easy to install.



JIFFY PANELING. Partitions and paneling can be installed quickly and easily using new prefinished section. Panels are stapled or nailed to wood strips (or furring) attached to old walls. Panels are slid into place along wood strips on ceiling and floor and secured with finish moulding.

Front Porch Takes On A New Mode Of Living

By The Associated Press

There was a time in America when folks liked to "set" out on the front porch and watch the neighbors go by.

Now we call it "outdoor living," and the area consigned to it usually is in the rear or side of the house rather than the front. Privacy, it seems, is what most people want nowadays.

Did you ever think of moving your front porch to conform to this new idea of living?

If you have a side or back entrance to the house, the project is less complicated. But a window can often be converted into a door so that your new porch can go wherever you want it.

Unlike your old front porch, make the new one more square-shaped instead of long and narrow, to accomodate tables and chairs.

For safety, it should be level with the room it adjoins; and for maximum use in summer and winter it should be covered. You can either use roofing to match the roof of your house, or one of the many colored corrugated plastics with composition glass.

How To Keep Garden In Bloom All Season

Continuous flowering beauty can be achieved by home owners by changing the plants in their garden or patio living area to supply steady bloom most of the year.

By having several small gardens or a half dozen tubs in which plants are changed often, the whole property can be made brighter and more cheerful for longer periods.

There are innumerable combinations of plants to afford new flower scenes.

Pots or tubs of plants changed often keep the whole property fresher and more colorful, without entailing great expense because the plants are changed only in small areas rather than over the whole property.

In tubs, many plants that are extremely beautiful but difficult to grow because of adverse local soil conditions can easily be maintained.

Husband And Convict Compared By Sinatra

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Frank Sinatra, who plays both a convict and a married man in "The Devil at 4 O'clock," says there isn't much difference between the two.

"The average married guy arises gulps coffee, rushes to a building where he's confined eight hours, rushes home, gulps dinner, collapses on the divan, watches television, crawls into bed.

"There's one difference. The married man can open his door from the inside."

Bad Times, Good Jokes

ELMIRA, N. Y. (AP) — Business has been bad at a local movie theater. When a woman called to ask what time the feature started, the cashier jokingly asked, "What time can you be here?"

Ceiling, Walls, Floor Figure In Renovation

By The Associated Press

Walls, ceilings and floors should be the first concern of home owners contemplating a remodeling program.

Or rather, ceilings, walls and floors — because that's the order the do-it-yourself renovating should take.

Like the backdrop on a stage, your walls, ceilings and floors can enhance your furnishings to the point where everything in the room appears almost new again.

And no longer does modernizing your walls mean hiring professional plasterers to do the job. With many of the materials on the market today, putting in a new wall, ceiling or floor can be handled by the average home handyman.

Dry wall construction—plywood, cement board, hardboard, fiber board, gypsum board and other materials applied in a dry process — characterizes most new homes today.

There also are alternatives — brick, marble, structural glass, stone and tile, to name a few, but many of these tend to get out of the realm of most do-it-yourselfers.

Not so with the various dry wallboards. They can be put right on top of old plaster walls in a fast, clean operation.

Both ceiling and walls must be furred out and leveled off. This means you must nail strips of wood, usually 3/4-inch thick, vertically on the walls and across the ceiling to provide a solid base to nail the new panels to.

The strips also require something more substantial than plaster to be fastened to, so you must locate the vertical wall studs behind the present wall.

In most houses, the studs are 16 inches apart. You can locate the first one by hammering a long nail through the plaster at short intervals until you hit something solid. Don't worry about the holes you make — you're going to cover them up.

Much of the paneling available today requires no work at all in the joints. The plywood industry, for example, has a whole family of boards of various textures and hues which are fastened to the furring with metal clips, invisible after the panel is in place.

Paper board and fiber board are installed with a crack filler that hides seams and nailheads, and many beveled types of pine paneling require no special tricks in the joints.

Ceilings, as mentioned, should be put up before you tackle the walls. While you may desire the ceiling to match the walls, don't overlook an acoustical ceiling material. There are many types available today.

In a playroom an acoustical ceiling will reduce the noise, and in a living room it will give better tone to your hi-fi or television.

Your old floors often can be recovered at less expense than a new carpet or rug. Or if you prefer, there probably still is much life left in your old hardwood floor if you sand it down to the new wood and refinish it.

New hardwood floors can be laid right over old ones, and many are completely finished at the factory —down to the waxing.

Cork, asphalt, clay, rubber and other composition tiles also can be laid right on top of existing floors, and most of these likewise are not too difficult for a do-it-yourselfer.

Investigate the various new types of wall, ceiling and floor coverings thoroughly. Chances are there is one to suit you — and easy to install.

JIFFY PANELING. Partitions and paneling can be installed quickly and easily using new prefinished section. Panels are stapled or nailed to wood strips (or furring) attached to old walls. Panels are slid into place along wood strips on ceiling and floor and secured with finish moulding.

Front Porch Takes On A New Mode Of Living

By The Associated Press

There was a time in America when folks liked to "set" out on the front porch and watch the neighbors go by.

Now we call it "outdoor living," and the area consigned to it usually is in the rear or side of the house rather than the front. Privacy, it seems, is what most people want nowadays.

Did you ever think of moving your front porch to conform to this new idea of living?

If you have a side or back entrance to the house, the project is less complicated. But a window can often be converted into a door so that your new porch can go wherever you want it.

Unlike your old front porch, make the new one more square-shaped instead of long and narrow, to accomodate tables and chairs.

For safety, it should be level with the room it adjoins; and for maximum use in summer and winter it should be covered. You can either use roofing to match the roof of your house, or one of the many colored corrugated plastics with composition glass.

How To Keep Garden In Bloom All Season

Continuous flowering beauty can be achieved by home owners by changing the plants in their garden or patio living area to supply steady bloom most of the year.

By having several small gardens or a half dozen tubs in which plants are changed often, the whole property can be made brighter and more cheerful for longer periods.

There are innumerable combinations of plants to afford new flower scenes.

Pots or tubs of plants changed often keep the whole property fresher and more colorful, without entailing great expense because the plants are changed only in small areas rather than over the whole property.

In tubs, many plants that are extremely beautiful but difficult to grow because of adverse local soil conditions can easily be maintained.

Landscaping Important In Fix-Up Plans

It's easy to plant the home property from a plan and, in the long run, it is more economical.

A good plan will tell you what and where to plant so you are certain, when the planting is completed, to have a far more beautiful and valuable property, providing more gracious living than ever.

There are basic steps to be followed in assuring top grade landscaping, according to the American Association of Nurserymen.

If you are building a new house, it is wise to consult with your landscape nurseryman.

For older homes whose landscaping is overgrown, a plan is just as necessary as with a new home.

Oftentimes, sound planning of relandscaping will save many overgrown plants. They can be transfered to locations where they will serve a definite purpose.

Once you have a good plan, the rest is easier. First comes the planting of one or more shade or flowering trees, depending on the size of your property.

Make a good lawn. Your nurseryman will advise open lawns for several reasons, mainly because open lawns are more attractive and are easier to mow.

The foundation planting comes next. If your planting has become scraggly and outmoded it may be best to tear it out and start all over.

As for the overall design, modern practice prescribes curved lines. Plants should not be higher than the bottom of ground floor windows. Larger plants at the corners are "tied together" by planting low-growing plants between them.

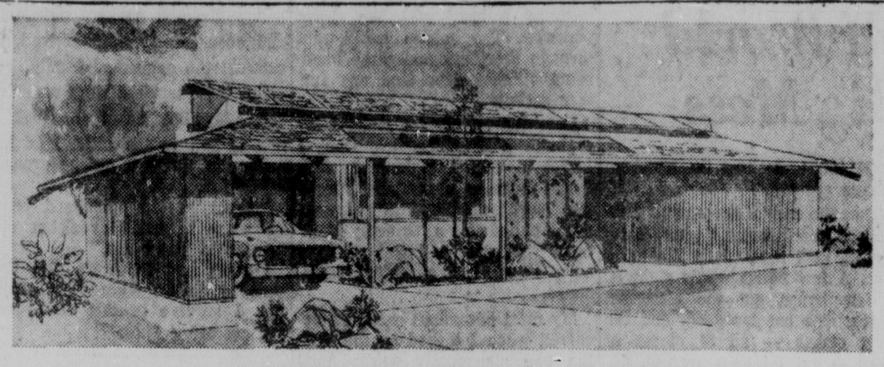
Specimen plants and special gardens provide for a gracious outdoor living area. Roses are a "must" somewhere in this space.

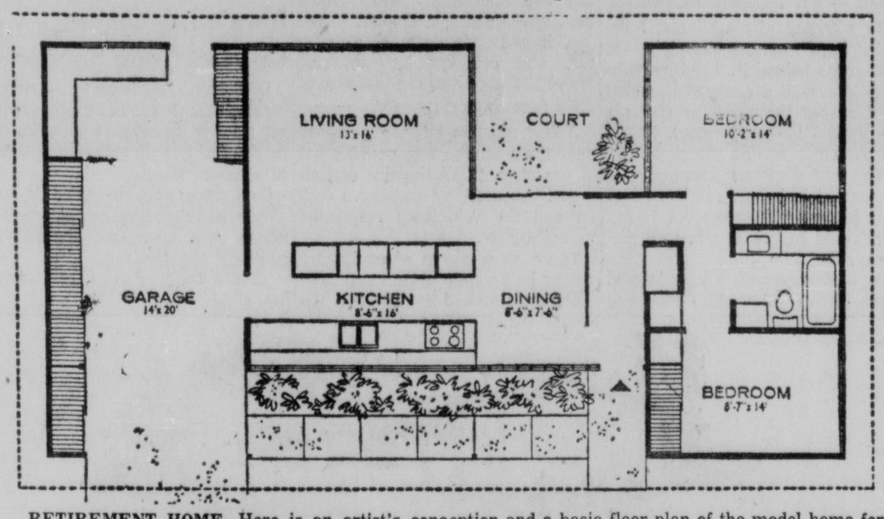
Perennials, flowering trees and shrubs should be planted to give a long blooming season to have something in flower at all times.

Use the very best plants available for this purpose. Dwarf fruit trees can be mighty attractive when in flower and in fruit.

Problem plantings come next. If you have an undesirable view of somebody's back yard—you can use plants to shut it off—at the same time providing beauty. Traffic noises can also be screened off by certain types of plants that are sound barriers.

The first chapel built on Navy property was dedicated at Annapolis, Md., on Feb. 5, 1854.





RETIREMENT HOME. Here is an artist's conception and a basic floor plan of the model home for the aged designed by architect Robert B. New Gardens Are Planted 'Pots And All' For Growth

Just imagine, plants and flowers that grow bigger, faster, more profusely!

Yes, results like these has prompeted a revolution among the spade and trowel set. Vegetable and flower seed home gardens can be planted in the same peat moss pots commercial growers use so successfully.

This new boon to home gardeneners, called the Jack Pot, is made of organic peat moss with growth nutrients added. Plant roots easliy penetrate the walls of the peat moss pot and, when it's time to transplant, the plant and pot are planted together.

Shock and growth retardation that usually occur during transplanting are eliminated because the tender roots are not disturbed.

The pot disintegrates in the ground to become a good grade of humus, and in the process also releases chemical nutrients that stimulate growth.

Stronger and faster-growing flowers and vegetables result, according to the Jack Pot Experimental Station.

Field tests have shown that plants started in the new pots grow two to wour weeks faster than plants started in ordinary pots.

Of particular interest to home gardeners is that the entire transplanting process is speeded and gardening is made easier and cleaner.

Peat moss pots are much the same shape and size as clay or plastic plant pots, but weigh only a fraction as much.

A package of 12 pots weighs less than three ounces, compared to two and a quarter pounds for 12 clay pots. Consequently the pots can be handled easily.

Dwarf Trees Aid In Home Garden

If you have only a small space for your home orchard, you can still enjoy a wide selection of fruit by planting dwarf trees, says the American Association of Nurserymen.

Dwarf trees need to be set only 10 to 12 feet apart. A space 30 feet square will contain nine dwarf trees with a fruit harvest sufficient for four or five people.

For temperate climates, apples, pears, peaches, plums and cherries provide an across-the-board selection. In the case of all fruit trees, two varieties of each type of fruit are desirable, and actually necessary when planting plum and cherry trees.

Most dwarf trees will bear the second year so you don't have to wait eight to 10 years to get fruit.

Strawberries can be planted between the trees if they are kept cultivated, with bush fruits at one side of the small orchard.

The care of dwarf fruit trees, including spraying, is simple enough, since these sprays annually is usually sufficient — once in early spring, when dormant, just before buds break out; a second time during the later part of flowering period as the fruit begins to set, and then a month or so later.

Here are a few varieties from which to select:

Apples — Cortland, Delicious, MacIntosh, Rome Beauty and Milton. Other excellent varieties for specific areas are listed by nurserymen everywhere.

Pears — Bartlett, Clapp's Favorite, Seckel and Bosc.

Plums and Prunes — Green Gage, Stanley, Abundance, Burbank, Reine Claude, Damson, etc.

Peaches — Hale Haven, Alberta, Golden Jubilee and Jerseyland.

Cherries — North Star, Brilliant New Meteor; others include Napoleon, Windsor, Montmorency and Black Tartarian.

Consult with your nurseryman for the best varieties for your area.

Flowering Trees Add Real Beauty

In selecting your flowering tree, do not do it haphazardly, advises the American Association of Nurserymen.

You are going to have this tree for many years and for it to be a continuous delight each year make sure you get what you really want. It costs no more to do this.

Try this. Study mail order nursery catalogues and visit local nurseries until you find the tree with ornamental flowers which will give your family the most pleasure.

There are many strikingly beautiful flowering trees. Perhaps your neighbor has one you have admired. Or take a drive during tree flowering time in the finest residential areas of your town, noting the most beautiful specimens.

Once you have the name of the tree you want, (you usually can get the name from your nurseryman if you have carefully noted flowers, color and other characteristics of the tree) select a good-sized tree in healthy condition. Pay a little more for it and get the best: it's worth it.

Plant the tree carefully, according to instructions and care for it well particularly during the first year. Watering is important. Soak the soil deeply, then water again just when the soil becomes dry.

Do-It-Yourself World Proves One Big Mess

By LYDIA BICKFORD
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Today's little homemaker, bless her capable heart, is not only a whiz with her Spock-raised children and her creative cuisine, but she's positively phenomenal as a fixer.

Let a faucet begin to drip, and she has installed a new washer. If the car won't start, she inspects the motor, and decides the spark plugs need cleaning.

She can repair a malfunctioning iron cord without fear of electrocution, re-condition a room with new wallpaper in an evening and build a barbecue without calling on the local mason for help.

Alas, not I.

I not only do not and cannot fix, but I break; so the fixing becomes even more intricate, requiring the services of a specialist who charges $5 just to look at the mayhem I have created.

Take the case of the warped dishwasher door. Nothing to it, I reflected, as I reached for the hammer. A few bangs would right it. A few bangs put the electrical connections out for good, and the dirty dishes — all 54 pieces of them — sat till help arrived.

In a frenzy of cleanliness, I decided to pull out the electric stove, and scrub behind it. The high voltage line and I connected, and I shot across the room to crumple up against the refrigerator. Now I do not clean behind the stove.

The tape dispenser jammed, and in one quick, helpful motion, I had it in pieces, with tape stuck to my hands and my clothes in wild disarray.

As befits one with a very helpful disposition, I offered to lend my husband a hand with the storm windows. The helpful hand went through the glass and three handsome stitches precluded any further activity.

Logs fall on my toe when I try to build a fireplace fire. Once I forgot to open the damper when I was burning paper and burned the wooden mantle. The insurance agent called this a "friendly fire," but I was positive I was going to burn down the ancestral farmhouse.

My most hazardous escapade occurred when I turned on the attic fan one abnormally warm April day, never giving a thought to the fact it had been dormant all winter, and not knowing anything about the care and conditioning of attic fans anyway.

A few minutes later, a neighbor announced smoke was pouring out of the attic. "Call the fire department!" shouted my husband. I called and the volunteers responded magnificently.

There were pieces of equipment strung half a mile up the road, the ambulance waited expectantly, the police directed curious sightseers and even the chaplain arrived, to comfort the anguished family.

But their services were unnecessary. My Boy Scout son took a box of salt to the attic, held his nose, and threw it on the grease-caked fan.

"Never," said my husband sternly, when he could speak at all, "never do that again."

I won't and I haven't. But I'm sure to do something else. How can I survive in this do-it-yourself world?

Iowa's Legislators Can Get Noon Snooze

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Members of the Iowa Legislature can get 40-wink snoozes at noon-day if they wish, but they have to climb 40 steps to do it.

Cots have been provided in an empty room above the Statehouse House chamber. One legislative employe observed:

"You'll really need a rest after the climb."

Heart Attack Causes All Trains To Stop

SEATTLE (AP) — The mandatory "red block" stop signal gleamed ahead down the tracks.

The engineer of the southbound "International" from Vancouver, B. C., braked his train to a stop. Minutes passed. A train crewman was sent ahead.

He found bridgetender Ole O. Brokken, 63, of Marysville, fatally stricken with a heart attack.

Brokken had opened the bridge for a passing boat on a slough north of here. He was unable to close it completely, and the automatic "red block" signal stopped all trains.

Expensive Wedding

GRISWOLD, Conn. (AP) — Mrs. William Fogarty tried to burn poison ivy from around her house. The house was burned to the extent of several thousand dollar's worth of damage. But the poison ivy was killed. It was trampled by firemen.

Step-By-Step Planning Aids Paint Project

By The Associated Press

There are many ways to redecorate a room — many wrong ways.

If you plan such a modernizing job, following the lead of the professionals can save you plenty of grief and frequently the cost of duplicating your efforts.

Here is the basic step-by-step painting procedure:

Start with the ceiling. Arrange your work platform or ladder so you can paint quickly and paint only the portion you can reach comfortably — usually no more than three feet in width. When you have finished a strip across the narrow width of the ceiling begin a second strip at the starting side.

Pait the walls next, starting in the upper corner of any wall.

If the walls are to be a different color than the ceiling, you first must paint a neat line next to the ceiling. Masking tape makes this job easier, but never use masking tape with latex paint.

You can paint a neat line without masking tape, however. Use a partially dry brush with a small amount of paint on the tips of the bristles only.

Angle the brush into the corner of the wall and ceiling and make light, horizontal strokes so the bristles ride naturally in the upper corner.

Proceed immediately by painting a small wall area to keep the edges of the line wet. Then brush or roll the wall paint on with vertical strokes, being careful not to splatter paint on the ceiling.

The final painting step involves the woodwork and trim, and it's best to wait until the walls and ceiling are dry.

Paint the window sash first, starting with the vertical members, then the horizontal ones. Follow by painting the sash frame; sliding the sash so you can paint all surfaces.

Next paint the sash tracks, then the casing — starting with the top section. Paint the edges first and finish the face surfaces last. Then paint the sill.

Then paint the doors — first the casing, then the door edge that swings toward the room being painted, either the hinge edge or lock edge.

Paint the baseboards last.

Kerosene Lamp Used Last Time At Precinct

POMEROY, Ohio (AP) — Poll workers in a Meigs County precinct will remember the 1960 presidential election as the last one in which they had to count votes by kerosene lamp.

For as long as anyone could remember, an abandoned one-room school house was the voting place because of its central location. It had been used only twice-a-year as a polling place since 1926.

Now, a new township hall several miles to the north will be used.

One who doesn't mind leaving the electric light-less school building is Mrs. Orville Rhodes, presiding judge. It was her job to get the old building cleaned up for use at each election.

On The Double

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Edgar D. Fisher's car was stolen in May, 1960. Police recovered it within 24 hours. It was stolen again in February, 1961 — or so he thought. Turned out a policeman, who knew about the 1960 theft, noted it parked and had it towed to headquarters.

Dwarf Trees Aid In Home Garden

If you have only a small space for your home orchard, you can still enjoy a wide selection of fruit by planting dwarf trees, says the American Association of Nurserymen.

Dwarf trees need to be set only 10 to 12 feet apart. A space 30 feet square will contain nine dwarf trees with a fruit harvest sufficient for four or five people.

For temperate climates, apples, pears, peaches, plums and cherries provide an across-the-board selection. In the case of all fruit trees, two varieties of each type of fruit are desirable, and actually necessary when planting plum and cherry trees.

Most dwarf trees will bear the second year so you don't have to wait eight to 10 years to get fruit.

Strawberries can be planted between the trees if they are kept cultivated, with bush fruits at one side of the small orchard.

The care of dwarf fruit trees, including spraying, is simple enough, since these sprays annually is usually sufficient — once in early spring, when dormant, just before buds break out; a second time during the later part of flowering period as the fruit begins to set, and then a month or so later.

Here are a few varieties from which to select:

Apples — Cortland, Delicious, MacIntosh, Rome Beauty and Milton. Other excellent varieties for specific areas are listed by nurserymen everywhere.

Pears — Bartlett, Clapp's Favorite, Seckel and Bosc.

Plums and Prunes — Green Gage, Stanley, Abundance, Burbank, Reine Claude, Damson, etc.

Peaches — Hale Haven, Alberta, Golden Jubilee and Jerseyland.

Cherries — North Star, Brilliant New Meteor; others include Napoleon, Windsor, Montmorency and Black Tartarian.

Flowering Trees Add Real Beauty

The fascination of a specimen flowering tree in its flowering season is one of the most delightful experiences of living to many home owners.

In selecting your flowering tree, do not do it haphazardly, advises the American Association of Nurserymen.

You are going to have this tree for many years and for it to be a continuous delight each year make sure you get what you really want. It costs no more to do this.

Try this. Study mail order nursery catalogues and visit local nurseries until you find the tree with ornamental flowers which will give your family the most pleasure.

There are many strikingly beautiful flowering trees. Perhaps your neighbor has one you have admired. Or take a drive during tree flowering time in the finest residential areas of your town, noting the most beautiful specimens.

Once you have the name of the tree you want, (you usually can get the name from your nurseryman if you have carefully noted flowers, color and other characteristics of the tree) select a good-sized tree in healthy condition. Pay a little more for it and get the best: it's worth it.

Plant the tree carefully, according to instructions and care for it well particularly during the first year. Watering is important. Soak the soil deeply, then water again just when the soil becomes dry.

Do-It-Yourself World Proves One Big Mess

By LYDIA BICKFORD
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Today's little homemaker, bless her capable heart, is not only a whiz with her Spock-raised children and her creative cuisine, but she's positively phenomenal as a fixer.

Let a faucet begin to drip, and she has installed a new washer. If the car won't start, she inspects the motor, and decides the spark plugs need cleaning.

She can repair a malfunctioning iron cord without fear of electrocution, re-condition a room with new wallpaper in an evening and build a barbecue without calling on the local mason for help.

Alas, not I.

I not only do not and cannot fix, but I break; so the fixing becomes even more intricate, requiring the services of a specialist who charges $5 just to look at the mayhem I have created.
